DESCRIPTION

An interesting and varied history having formerly been a subsidiary seat of the Rolle family and also includes the Grade II listed Beam Aqueduct, which was built in 1824 to carry Torridge Canal and is the birthplace of Tarka the Otter from Henry Williamson's celebrated novel. The manor house has also previously been used as a convalescence home for injured soldiers during World War I and in more recent times has been a school. It has most recently been used as an outdoor adventure centre, which was established in 1987.

THE HOUSE

A three storey former manor house currently configured for its current use as an adventure centre with a great deal of dormitories, teacher bedrooms and staff accommodation. In all the building amounts to 16,467 sq ft. Attached to the main house is the 1980s accommodation block which also includes the dining room and kitchen which has been fitted to commercial kitchen standards, with dual phase electricity connection, canopy extraction, gas safety system and fire suppression system.

THE COTTAGE & STABLES

There is further accommodation including the Cottage which was formerly the Manager's house, which is a two bedroom cottage with adjacent gardens. There is also the former Stables which is over two floors with a number of small bedrooms and bathrooms.

OUTBUILDINGS

There are a range of further outbuildings which include a workshop with 3-phase electric connected, offices, store and classroom building which includes the disco room.

GROUND S

The grounds wrap around the main house and buildings and comprise a mix of parkland, former walled garden and woodland. Located within the walled garden is a former cob summerhouse.

SERVICES

Calor gas heating to the main house, extension and cottage. Oil heating to the Stables and some of the outbuildings.
