There are modern double glazed windows and doors and the building is in very good condition overall.

GUIDE PRICE £249,950

THE PROPERTY

This interesting building is believed to have been the former stable and coach house for No. 38-39 Lemon Street before being used as a workshop and subsequently offices since 1993. The building is however not listed although it does fall within the Truro conservation area.

The property has been well maintained in recent years yet it has retained some character features and has the potential to be a great little city home. There are modern double glazed windows and doors and the building is in very good condition overall.

The existing ground floor has two office rooms, a kitchen and a WC, the proposal seeks to convert the two office rooms to a bedroom and kitchen and the existing kitchen and WC space to a bathroom and toilet. The first floor contains one room used as an office, this room would be converted to a living room. There are no external alterations proposed to the existing building. A single parking space would be retained and the remaining parking area would be built up to create raised flower beds.
