GENERAL COMMENTS

This is a very special property of a type that is rarely available. Corwenna is set completely on its own in unspoiled countryside within the beautiful Roseland Peninsula and is protected by nearly two acres of its own land. The property comprises a large versatile detached period house, extended in recent years together with a single storey range of traditional outbuildings and all of which enjoys the most superb setting with the gardens and grounds landscaped and planted to provide privacy and shelter.

The property will be of wide appeal but especially those seeking a traditional Roseland property of character which has been maintained and presented to the highest standard.

This comprises a large versatile dwelling which is the skilful and careful merging of the original farmhouse with the adjacent two storey barn and now linked by a very spacious entrance hallway reminiscent of an "orangery" with glazed arched panels and doors to both front and rear elevations.

The accommodation within the farmhouse comprises an entrance porch, sitting room/dining room, kitchen with Aga, utility, oak frame garden room, a master bedroom with dressing room and balcony, bedroom two and family bathroom.

The accommodation within the barn is arranged on the reverse level principle and on the first floor there is a particularly impressive triple aspect galleried recreation area and a large sitting room with an open vaulted ceiling and focusing to a feature fireplace with wood burning stove. On the lower floor of this part of the house there are two double bedrooms, a separate shower room and also the family bathroom.

The arrangement of the accommodation may well suit those with a dependent relative and subject to consent the house could easily be adapted to form two separate units.

HISTORY

Corwenna occupies an ancient site and as a farm it was part of the Domesday manor of Tretheake which was held by the Bodrugan family of Gorran. In the late 15th Century it passed into the Estate of the Edgcombe family of Cothele where it stayed for the next four hundred years or so. In the early 20th Century it passed into the hands of Caerhays Estate who then sold the farmhouse and buildings in 1980. It is interesting to note that the rent of the whole farm for very many years was 20 shillings per annum plus a capon at Christmas.

The property in its current form possibly dates from the 1800's but there are certainly earlier origins and also some later additions. In 1988 the farmhouse and barn were joined by the previous owners whilst the modern slate hung and oak framed extension was added in 2018, creating a stunning garden room and master bedroom with balcony.

LOCATION

Corwenna is set within the Parish of Veryan but is closer to the hamlet of East and West Portholland which are two of the most unspoiled coves on the eastern edge of the Peninsula. In the immediate area the vast majority of the properties are owned by the Caerhays Estate and in many respects the surrounding area has remained largely unchanged for the last one hundred years or more. East and West Portholland have recently been declared a National Heritage Asset and this part of the Peninsula is often described as an area of "real" Cornwall where little or no development has taken place in recent years.

Corwenna is also just over a mile from the unspoiled fishing village of Portloe which is equally picturesque and is one of the "jewels" of the Roseland Peninsula. It has seen little or no intensive development in modern times and still retains its traditional atmosphere with clusters of old stone cottages set in a cleft of the cliff and descending to a small harbour still used by local fisherman but with the industry now sadly concentrating on crab and lobsters.

About two miles from Corwenna is the larger village of Veryan, known for its picturesque round houses built in the 19th Century by a clergyman. Here there is a pub, church, primary school, post office/general store as well as a social/sports hall with indoor bowls and tennis courts. Much of the land in the area is owned and protected by the National Trust and the cliff top walks in the immediate vicinity are exceptional. The nearby Carne and Pendower beach is also a favourite with locals and visitors alike.

The city of Truro with its Cathedral and fine shopping centre is about thirteen miles away. There is a main line railway station to London (Paddington) and also the Treliske Hospital which serves the whole of the county.
