Village idyll with farmhouse, cottage, outbuildings, gardens and land

Box Tree Farmhouse is situated in a highly sought-after edge of village setting - it's the perfect package of main residence, an attached cottage with income potential, outbuildings, gardens, land and lovely views of the Barbon Fells.

Since the current owners' purchase in 2014, the property has been completely renovated and extensively refurbished (a list of works is available from the agent). It now offers a stunning, exquisitely presented home, exceptionally well-appointed with high quality fixtures and fittings.

Thought to date back to the mid 18th Century, many of the original features remain with two gabled stone porches with benches, an oak spice cupboard in the drawing room, oak ceiling, cruck beams and window lintels, window seats, a combination of boarded and panelled doors with Suffolk latches, wall panelling on the landing, substantial stone lintel and fireplace (unexpectedly uncovered during the refurbishment) and decorative oak fireplace in the drawing room with tiled slips and hearth and copper canopy.

Outside there is a row of stone and slate outbuildings and a detached stone outbuilding. Of particular note, is a Bee Bole in the cottage garden. Often found in south facing walls (as this one is), a bee bole is an alcove or cavity, which would house a skep, an open ended basket of wicker, heather or straw used before the development of modern beehives.

It's now time for new custodians to enjoy and delight in this idyllic village setting and truly special property. There is also the potential to enhance further and extend, subject to the relevant consents.
