This remarkable semi-detached home in Hampstead Garden Suburb is an architectural treasure. With four to five bedrooms and three bathrooms, it stands among seven well-arranged Grade II listed houses, showcasing Parker and Unwin's arts & crafts vision. Designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens, the home was constructed between 1912 and 1913. It has been sympathetically restored to blend original character with modern living.

Located within one of the suburb's most picturesque squares, the property offers convenient access to central London. Positioned 100 metres from the Heath Extension and an eight-minute walk to Golders Green Underground station, the location is ideal.
