A charming period flint house with versatile annexe accommodation well suited to multi-generational living, guest accommodation or studio. Well presented with period features and modern fixtures and fittings. With pleasant gardens, driveway and extensive garage/workshop. Viewings recommended.

This charming period house is pleasantly situated in the large and well served west Norfolk village of Felthwell. Built in traditional materials including flint, brick and chalk lump under a pantiled roof, this delightful home has been adapted in recent years to provide a useful one bedroom cottage annexe with the accommodation all at ground floor level, ideal for those purchasers seeking a multi generational home, guest cottage or a sanctuary for hobbyist or artist. Whilst the annexe cottage boasts well proportioned accommodation including a sitting room, kitchen/diner and shower room, the main house also offers generous accommodation over two floors including a large lounge/dining area, well fitted kitchen with cloakroom off and a rear conservatory. There are three good size bedrooms to the first floor and a bathroom with separate shower cubicle. In addition benefits include oil central heating, wood burning stoves and Upvc double glazing.

Outside there are pleasant gardens, the rear garden backing onto private paddock land. A brick paved driveway at the side provides parking and leads to a substantial garage/workshop which is approximately 39' 3" x 16' 4" long.

Whilst this property combines a family home and annexe, the annexe accommodation could easily be combined with the main house to enhance the existing ground floor layout should a buyer so desire. The flexibility of the accommodation gives choice to purchasers seeking a period village home and early viewings are recommended.
