FULHAM AREA GUIDE

The Crabtree Estate

Located in the northwest corner of Fulham close to Charring Cross Hospital, this area once belonged to Fulham’s last farmer, Edward Matyear, who owned Crabtree Farm. His land stretched from Crabtree Lane in the South to Colwith Road in the North, and the area is named after the crab apple trees that grew there. Upon his death in 1910 he left the land to the King Edward VII Hospital Fund, who then sold it to local developers Allen & Norris. They built the estate that stands to this day, although back then you could pick up a house for the princely sum of £285 each.

The close proximity of Hammersmith underground station (District Line, Piccadilly Line and Hammersmith & City Line, Zone 2), the Thames path and a Michelin star restaurant, The River Cafe (where Jamie Oliver began his career) make this a popular area. You can walk, cycle or run the Thames path all the way to Windsor and beyond if you’ve got the legs for it and this really is a benefit of the area. There are a variety of pubs and eateries along the river as well as a number of new riverside developments that have improved the river walkway and added to the coffee shop and restaurant options nearby.
