DESCRIPTION

Fabulous six bedroom, traditional Northumbrian Farmhouse in the small hamlet of Glororum, Bamburgh, with a lovely private garden of circa 0.9 acres, extensive gated driveway parking and superb south facing, open aspect views to the surrounding fields and countryside. No Upward Chain.

The impressive Grade II listed stone built period Farmhouse, built in ashlar Stone with a Welsh slate roof, offers impressive and well proportioned accommodation set over three floors with three reception rooms & six bedrooms. Many period features have been retained including; original twelve and sixteen pane sash windows with working shutters, decorative ceiling coving, an original balustrade staircase, wood floors and attractive period cast iron fireplaces in the majority of the bedrooms.

The property has been a much loved family home for the current owners for many generations, and offers a great opportunity as a large main family home, or second home on the coast - the house has in the past been used as a successful commercial holiday let for larger parties and families.

Glororum Farmhouse has a great history , having been the birthplace (1821) and home of John Turnbull Thomson, noted Chartered Surveyor, before he travelled to Singapore and New Zealand, who became the first Surveyor General of New Zealand.
