Situation

The Old Dairy, located at 1 Honeyborough Grove, resides in the Honeyborough area, which has become an integral part of the quaint town of Neyland. Positioned on the northern shoreline of the Cleddau Estuary's tidal waters, Neyland offers a picturesque setting rich in history and community spirit.

Historically, Neyland was a modest fishing village within the parish of Llanstadwell. Its transformation began in 1856 when it was selected as the western terminus for Isambard Kingdom Brunel's Great Western Railway, establishing a transatlantic terminal for the era's largest ships. This development spurred rapid growth, with the Picton Castle and Lawrenny Estates granting numerous leases for house building. The town saw the addition of four new chapels, various shops, and enhanced services, elevating its status significantly.

Today, Neyland boasts a variety of local amenities, including a convenience store, a primary school, and a doctor's surgery. The town is also home to a popular riverside marina development, Neyland Yacht Haven, which provides 420 berths with full tidal access. Adjacent to the marina is the renowned Brunel Trail, a scenic cycle pathway and nature reserve that follows the route of the former Great Western Railway, offering residents and visitors alike a blend of leisure and history.

Geographically, Neyland is conveniently situated just off the A477 roadway, connecting Pembroke Dock to Milford Haven. This location provides easy access to the twin towns of Pembroke Dock to the south, as well as Milford Haven and Haverfordwest to the west and north, respectively. Each of these neighboring towns offers a wide range of employment opportunities, shopping facilities, and social amenities, contributing to the appeal of residing in Neyland.

The combination of historical significance, modern amenities, and a strong sense of community makes Neyland, and by extension Honeyborough, a desirable place to live, offering both tranquility and convenience in the heart of Pembrokeshire.

Description

The Old Dairy, is a Grade II listed smallholding featuring a substantial detached residence with solid stone walls and a rear extension that blend historical character with modern living. Set within approximately half an acre of grounds, the property also includes an additional 5.5 acres of level pasture land.

Externally

At the front of the property, there is a small forecourt providing off-road parking and a pathway leading to the residence's main entrance.

To the rear, close to the house, lies a collection of dilapidated former farm buildings. These structures lack roof coverings, and their visible walls are overgrown with vegetation. It is presumed that these buildings once served as cow sheds and a dairy. Additionally, there is a distinctive paved area offering off-road parking and vehicular access to the rear gardens and land.

The primary grounds immediately behind the residence are predominantly laid to lawn and include a timber-built storage shed.

A gated access from this garden area leads to the land of approximately three level, productive pasture fields.

Externally.

The Land

The property encompasses approximately 6 acres. The main residence, along with the derelict outbuilding and surrounding grounds, covers just over half an acre. The remaining 5.5 acres consist of three contiguous, level pasture fields.

Access to these fields is available through a gateway located within the residence's rear garden or via a gate off West Lane, which terminates at the end of this adopted highway.

The land itself is level, productive pasture, well-fenced, and appears to have been recently used for grazing and cropping.

Overage Clause

The property is being sold subject to an overage clause.

The overage clause will be 25% of the uplift in value of the land above its apportioned sale price if planning consent for residential development is granted on the land for a period of 25 years from the date of completion of the sale with the cost of obtaining the planning consent being deducted from the uplift. The Overage will be secured by a restriction on the title.
