The Salamis Area

The ancient city of Salamis became the capital of Cyprus as far back as 1100 BC. The city shared the destiny of the rest of the island during the successive occupations by the various dominant powers of the Near East, viz. the Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, and Romans. The ancient site covers an area of one square mile extending along the sea shore. There is still a large area awaiting excavation and this is forested with mimosa, pine and eucalyptus trees. The amphitheatre at Salamis originally held over 15,000 people. Modern concerts are still held there today. Next to the ruins of Salamis, Silver Beach is an ideal spot to combine a bit of culture and some serious sun-worshipping.
