This traditional Victorian terrace in the Stoke area offers a well-sized, practical home with a blend of everyday comfort and a convenient location. Situated on a main road surrounded by small shops and local businesses, the property is just a short walk to Ball Hill Shopping Centre, Sacred Heart Primary, and Stoke Park School, while a regular bus service connects you quickly to the city centre. For parking, residents typically use on-street spaces along nearby Harefield Road.

Inside, a long hallway leads you into the light-filled lounge, where a large bay window lets in plenty of natural light. The neutral décor and soft carpet create a calm, comfortable atmosphere, while the chimney breast adds a touch of character. Beyond, the dining room offers a practical, sociable space with laminate flooring — ideal for family meals or everyday use.

The kitchen, set at the back of the house, features tiled floors and walls, shaker-style cabinets, and room for a fridge-freezer, cooker, and washing machine. Though slightly dated, it's clean, functional, and offers good potential for future updates. A small utility area just off the kitchen provides useful extra space for laundry or storage.

Upstairs, you'll find three large double bedrooms, each with a chimney breast and plenty of space to arrange furniture as you wish. The main bedroom stretches the full width of the front of the house and includes built-in wardrobes, making it a generous and practical main room. The bathroom is compact and a little dated but clean and functional, leaving scope for you to modernise if desired.

To the rear, the south-facing garden feels private and secure, enclosed by wooden fencing on one side and a brick wall on the other. A small patio area leads onto a neat lawn with a path running to the back — a simple, low-maintenance outdoor space that's not overlooked, perfect for enjoying sunny afternoons or letting children play safely.

Offered with no chain and in good, move-in-ready condition, this home combines charm with practicality, making it a solid choice for families or anyone looking for a well-located property close to schools, shops, and transport connections, with convenient on-street parking nearby.
