Thurnscoe

Thurnscoe is a village in the metropolitan borough of Barnsley in South Yorkshire, England. Thurnscoe's oldest building is the Church of St. Helen on High Street, built in 812 by the Saxons and rebuilt in 1087 by the Normans.

Heating System

An air to water heat pump is a device that specifically creates heat for your heating or hot water system. Unlike an air conditioning unit (commonly referred to as an air-to-air heat pump), which can both cool and deliver heat, an air to water heat pump focuses solely on heating. There are 16 solar panels to the property. All documents are available to be viewed within the property upon viewing. The income generated from the solar panels contributes towards the running costs of the property.
