HISTORY

Gwern-y-go Farm has been a major farm in this area since a grange of the Cistercian Abbey of Cwm-hir, Radnorshire was established in the medieval period. The farm buildings date from a planned development of the farm in the early to mid 19th century to provide self-contained feed handling facilities and housing for livestock. The buildings are still used for livestock housing today.

DESCRIPTION

Gwern-y-go Barns are grade II listed due to them being a well preserved example of a building specifically designed for animal husbandry. The barns are constructed of brick walls under mainly slate roofs.

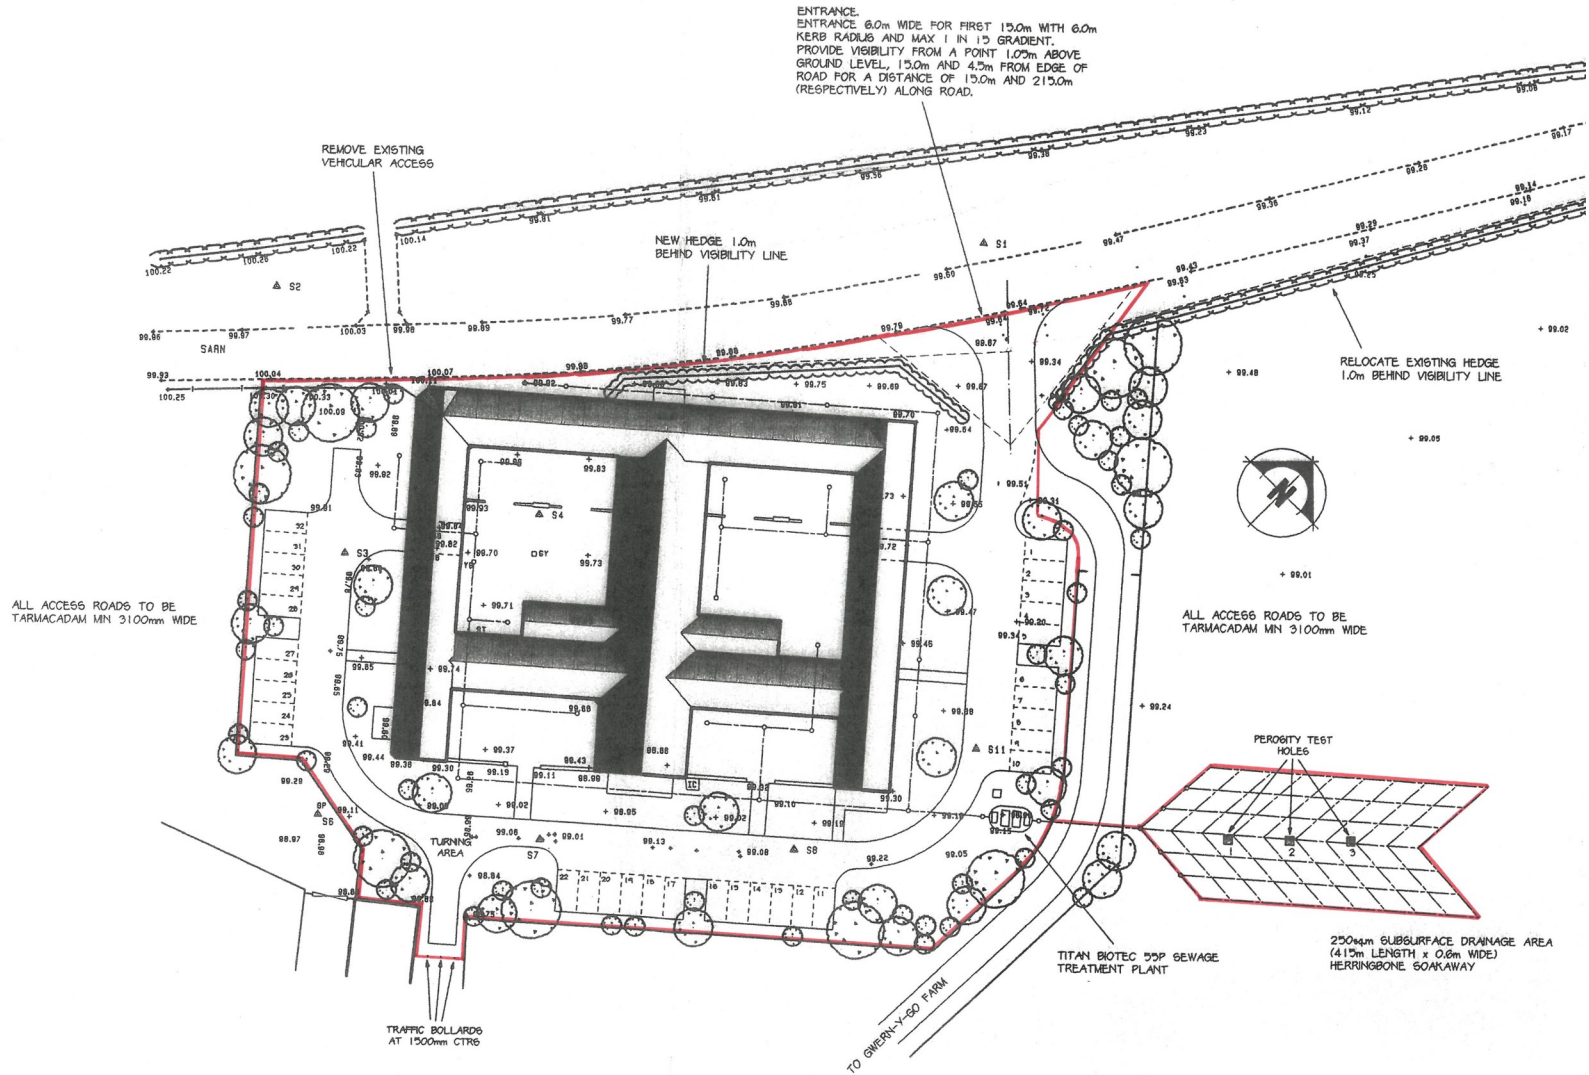

They are laid out in a symmetrical plan comprising two enclosed yards separated by a large 6 bay building, with an open-fronted cart house with round arches, and a loft over. On each side of this there are two small rectangular stockyards with a central gate which serves three animal houses each side. There is a bounty of character features throughout the buildings; including boarded stable doors in wooden frames, ventilated windows, an octagonal ventilator turret with spire at the centre and ventilated brickwork on the gable walls.

The buildings have Listed Building Consent (M/2004/0643) and Full Planning Consent (M/2004/0635) for 13 dwellings with associated works. All pre-commencement conditions on the planning consent have been discharged. Powys County Council have confirmed that development has commenced. Copies of all the approved plans are available at the agent's Welshpool Office to view.
