Location

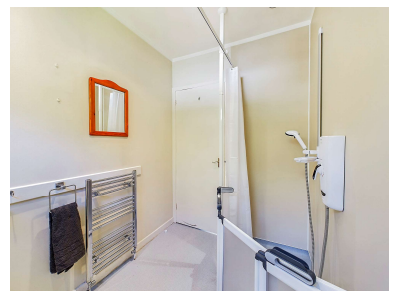

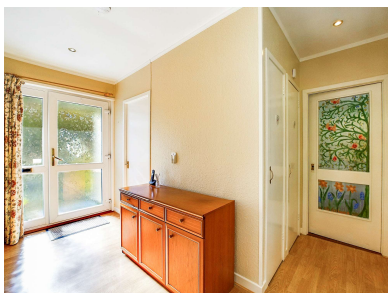

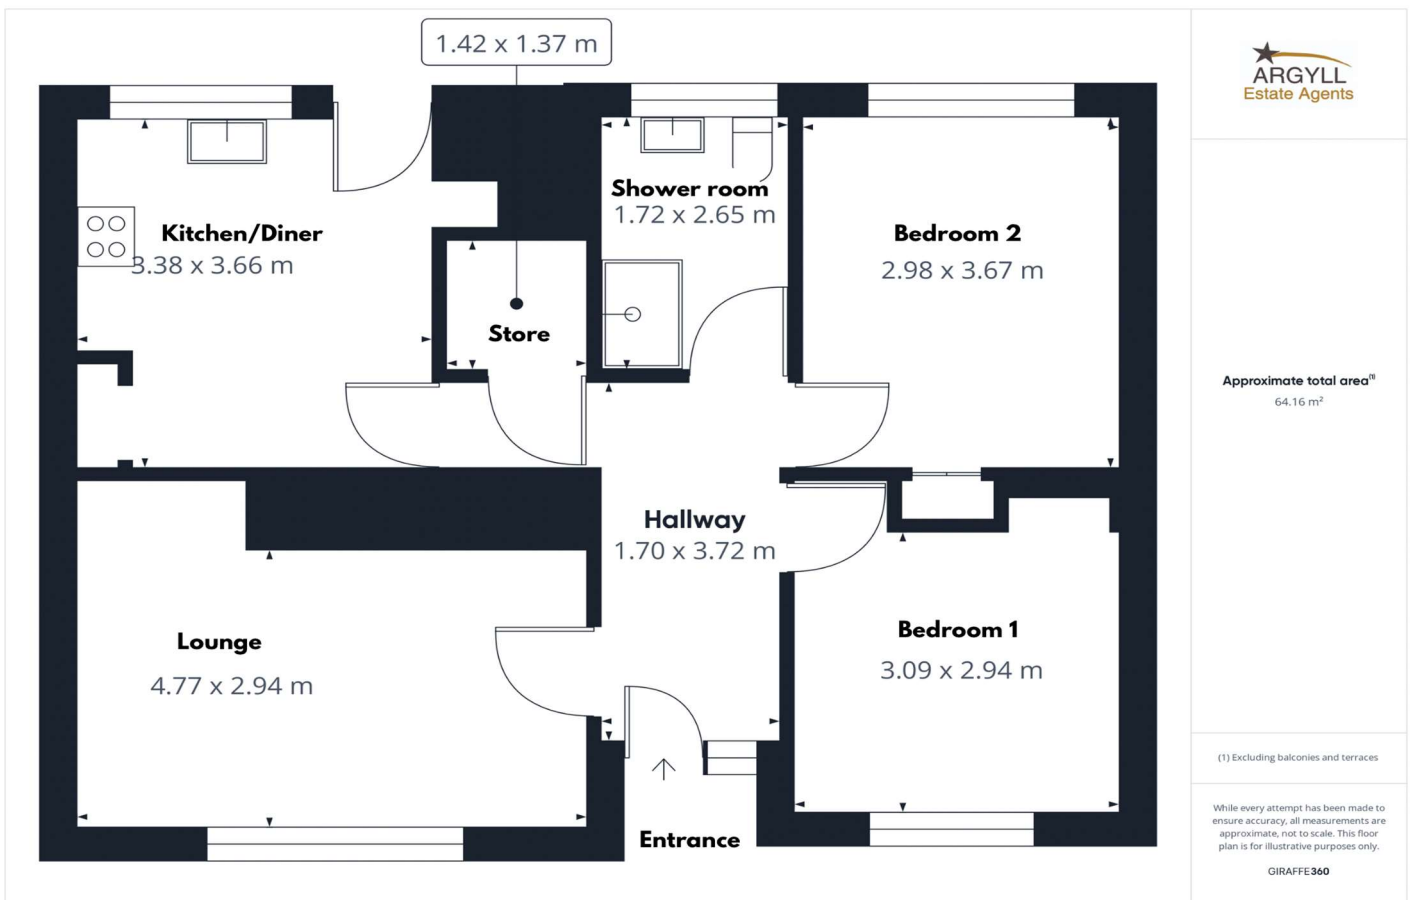

Crinan is a small coastal village in the west coast of Scotland, located in the region known as Knapdale, part of Argyll and Bute. Prior to the Crinan Canal being built, Crinan was known as Port Rìgh, which means the king's port. The Canal starts at Ardrishaig sea loch on Loch Gilp and ends nine miles away at Crinan sea loch on the Sound of Jura. There is a Hotel and a boatyard. Lochgilphead is a short 5-mile journey and provides a larger range of amenities, including primary and secondary school, a hospital, supermarkets, fuel stations, cafes, pubs, restaurants, hotels, Tesco express, dentist, opticians, vets and many more.
