Location

Not Clifton, not Hotwells, but sandwiched in between, Cliftonwood (so-called due to the small wood in the middle which forms part of Goldney Hall gardens) is a surprisingly peaceful neighbourhood half a mile from Bristol city centre, overlooking Bristol Harbourside. There are only two roads in & out of Cliftonwood (which may explain the tranquillity) and it is probably known to most Bristolians and tourists as the colourful area you can see from Baltic Wharf! A community garden is the hub of the community, and The Lion has been a much-loved pub for many years serving legendary Sunday roasts.

Nearby, a stroll through the Clifton Village reveals a unique and vibrant shopping experience, characterized by a range of independent shops, boutiques, and cafes that showcase the local businesses. Residents benefit from good transport links, including buses and local train services, facilitating convenient travel within the city. For those with a penchant for exploration beyond Clifton, major roads are easily accessible.
