"Hurricane House" is named after the "Hawker Hurricane fighters" flown from North Weald's historic airfield and is believed to have served as an officer's residence, a notion supported by the property's considerable size. This impressive five bedroom semi-detached family home is rich in character and features a spacious interior, thoughtfully arranged over three floors.

The residence is set on a south-facing plot of approximately 0.25 acres, backing onto Roughly Wood. Centrally positioned, the house includes an expansive 80-foot garden at the rear and a 65-foot garden at the front. There is ample parking available for multiple vehicles, as well as a garage for additional storage.

At the rear of the house, an inviting patio area enhances the outdoor space, and private gated access leads directly into Roughly Wood, providing a unique advantage. Inside, the home boasts three generous reception rooms: a stunning living room with wood flooring, a wood burner, and bow windows; a dining room; and a family room with an attractive wooden glazed gable end.

The modern high-gloss kitchen is designed for family living, featuring numerous units, ample worktops, and modern built-in appliances. Additionally, a convenient ground-floor shower room and a dedicated study facilitate home working.

The first floor hosts three spacious double bedrooms and a sizable single bedroom, with the main bedroom benefiting from an en-suite shower room. A well-appointed family shower room includes a full-width, step-in shower. Access to the second floor reveals a beautifully converted loft room which has been used in the past as a fifth bedroom, but also provides a fantastic space for teenagers or adults.

A piece of local history highlights that Hurricane House was once inhabited by a Royal Air Force officer, drawing its name from the famous aircraft. Artefacts uncovered by a previous owner were donated to the North Weald Air Museum, where they remain on display today.
