We have tried to make sure that these particulars are accurate but, to a large extent, we have to rely on what the seller tells us about the property. Once you find the property you want to buy, you will need to carry out more investigations into the property than it is practical or reasonable for an estate agent to do when preparing sales particulars. For example, we have not carried out any kind of survey of the property to look for structural defects and would advise any homebuyer to obtain a surveyor's report before exchanging contracts. If you do not have your own surveyor, we would be pleased to recommend one. We have not checked whether any equipment in the property (such as central heating) is in working order and would advise homebuyers to check this. You should also instruct a solicitor to investigate all legal matters relating to the property (e.g. title, planning permission, etc) as these are specialist matters in which estate agents are not qualified. Your solicitor will also agree with the seller what items (e.g. carpets, curtains, etc) will be included in the sale.

Located on the West of the town centre, just yards from Eastbourne's theatre district and dating back to 1860, this Grade 2 Listed elegant townhouse, the last remaining whole property in the terrace, is currently used as a student letting house with eight double bedrooms and one/two receptions where sea views are enjoyed from the upper floors. The property is arranged with a central kitchen and a dining/utility room, with a first floor sitting room and gated rear access to the courtyard which doubles as off street parking if needed. In addition, there are two shower room/wc's and a further separate WC also included. With nearby shops and eateries and Devonshire Park also easily accessible, this lovely property provides existing investment use but also has scope to convert back to a single residential dwelling or conversion to flats, subject to consents.
