Description

Tudor Rose cottage is a fine example of a Grade II listed semi-detached home. From its 17th century origins, possibly as a mediaeval hall house, timber framed with Wattle and Daub rendered infills, where accommodation was once shared with the animals! Laterally the cottage was extended and altered in Victorian times with arts and crafts influence with the addition of briquette fireplaces, loggia with brick columns and additional fenestration to the rear. This eclectic mix creates a charming home with cosy comfortable rooms set in a delightful plot in this semi rural location, backing onto a stable yard with excellent local hacking. Chestnut Street is almost a hamlet within Borden village to the west, excellent access to the A249 which connects Sittingbourne M2 and Maidstone M20. Borden has a Norman church, popular local school, pub and community centre with several new developments creating a vibrant community. The present owners have thoroughly enjoyed the last 22 years at Tudor Rose cottage where they have made significant improvements while still retaining the original charm.

Location

The property is located on the outskirts of Borden, a village south-west of Sittingbourne, Kent, offers a blend of village charm and proximity to the larger town's amenities. It's characterised by its historic Parish Church, a Grade I listed building, and its growing residential area with new housing developments. Borden provides a peaceful, village atmosphere with access to amenities like a craft centre and the Sittingbourne Steam Railway. Borden is well-connected, with Sittingbourne's train station offering convenient access to London and other major cities. Major roads like the A2, M2, and M20 are also easily accessible, making it convenient for commuters and those who enjoy exploring the region. Sittingbourne town centre and railway station are approximately 2 miles away. There is a primary school in Borden Village and schools for children of all ages, including Grammar Schools, are available in Sittingbourne. The X3 bus route is approx 100m from the property, which runs once an hour which connects Maidstone/Sittingbourne/Faversham and Canterbury.
