AIKWOOD TOWER

SELKIRK, TD7 5HJ

 5 BED  5 BATH  5 PUBLIC

HISTORICAL OVERVIEW

Aikwood Tower is an exceptional 16th-century tower house, rising over four storeys with an attic floor. Granted to Robert Scott by King James V in 1517, the tower was likely constructed shortly after, potentially as early as 1535, though the exact completion date is unknown. It has remained within branches of the Scott Clan ever since.

The site's history extends further back—legend has it that an earlier building here was home to Michael Scott, the famed 13th-century scholar and 'wizard'. Michael studied in Oxford, Paris, Padua, and Toledo, translated the works of Aristotle, tutored Emperor Frederick II, and gained renown for his so-called magical abilities.

Having fallen into disrepair by the 19th century, Aikwood Tower was meticulously restored in the late 1980s, receiving numerous prestigious architectural awards. Perched high above the Ettrick Water, the property enjoys magnificent panoramic views.

The current owners have upgraded and lovingly maintained the property to a high standard throughout.

Accommodation

Accessed via a charming walled garden, the entrance opens into a welcoming hallway with vaulted ceilings that immediately showcases the tower's unique architectural features and craftsmanship. To the left, a rare left-turning (Kerry-handed) spiral staircase leads to the upper floors. Ahead lies a fully equipped kitchen with an AGA, a pantry, and space for informal dining.

The ground floor also features the Laich Hall, a versatile room with a galleried upper level and stairs leading to it. French doors open to both the courtyard and the walled garden. For those considering commercial use, the ground floor includes two WCs and a fully fitted function kitchen, which could also be repurposed for private living.

On the first floor, the magnificent Great Hall is the heart of the home, complete with an intricate, historically significant fireplace and a galleried connection to the adjacent upper level. The Laird's Study, also on this floor, offers a cosy retreat with a wood-burning stove.

Bedrooms

Across the galleried landing is the first of the five bedrooms. The Harden bedroom has its own en suite and private staircase to the ground floor. The principal suite (Buccleuch) occupies the entire second floor, offering stunning countryside views and an adjacent luxurious bathroom.

Three additional en suite bedrooms are found across the third and fourth floors, each with breath taking views.

Courtyard and Cart Shed

To the east is a courtyard area with a detached stone-built former cart shed, which has been transformed in to a large function room.

Gardens

To the west lies a beautifully maintained walled garden, a sun trap throughout the day. Featuring a delightful mix of shrubs, trees, a spectacular laburnum arch, and a small but productive apple orchard, the garden offers colour year-round and attracts local wildlife. Much of the space is laid to lawn, making it ideal for relaxation and outdoor enjoyment.

Location

Aikwood Tower boasts an elevated, private setting overlooking the Ettrick Water and the rolling hills of the Scottish Borders. Despite its seclusion, the town of Selkirk is just four miles away, while Edinburgh is within easy commuting distance at 40 miles.

The surrounding countryside is among the most unspoiled in the region and is perfect for outdoor pursuits, including world-class fishing, shooting, golf, walking, and mountain biking. The nearby village of Ettrickbridge is home to a traditional coaching inn, recently named Scotland's Best Pub by VisitScotland.

Local towns such as Melrose, Galashiels, Innerleithen, and Peebles offer a wide array of shops, restaurants, and services. Melrose is also home to the respected St Mary's
