FINE & COUNTRY

Welcome to Sycamores, Barnoldswick Lane, Burton in Lonsdale, LA6 3LZ

We were immediately struck by what an enormously open opportunity and flexible property this represents – whether you are looking for one large property for family life, or a pair of self-contained cottages, this has potential for you.

Enjoying an enviable rural position with the benefit of unspoiled views of the surrounding undulating countryside, Sycamores and Beeches are nestled in a small enclave of individual properties, thus offering the advantages of a small community whilst still maintaining a private setting, all located on the outskirts of a popular village which has great accessibility to the wider environs and road network.

This former agricultural barn originally gained consent for conversion to a pair of self-contained holiday cottages and for many years they operated successfully as such. More recently, consent was obtained for use on a purely residential basis representing immense potential for either remodeling into one large property or continuing use separately, maybe for multi-generational living, or owner occupation of one and letting of the other for an additional income. It might even be that new owners choose to let both on Assured Shorthold Tenancies – it's an immensely versatile and flexible opportunity and will therefore suit a wide variety of buyers. The barn sits in gated and walled gardens which offer parking, lawn areas and a flagged seating terrace. For green fingered residents the gardens offer exciting scope for landscaping.

Location

An attractive and sought after village that nestles on the edge of the Yorkshire Dales National Park, Burton in Lonsdale has been called both “the first and last village in Yorkshire” also lying close to the boundaries of both Lancashire and Cumbria, thus ensuring that there is fantastic open countryside in whichever direction you go. The village tucks into the hillside above the River Greta and from 1670 was home to thirteen potteries over the centuries earning it the name ‘Black Burton’ due to the smoke from the kilns. Those days are long gone, the last pottery closing in 1944, today it is a sought-after village with a strong sense of community, popular for its accessibility, either onto the A683 for travel through the Lune Valley to Lancaster and the M6 or via the A65 for journeys west to Kirkby Lonsdale or east to Settle, Skipton and into Yorkshire. It’s not just accessible by road either, there are train stations at High Bentham and Wennington, both are tremendous assets being on the Bentham Line running between Leeds and Morecambe via Skipton with services into Lancaster (great for when teenagers are ready for a degree of independence) or for venturing into Leeds for a day’s shopping, concert or theatre trip. Rural it may be but isolated it certainly is not.

Surrounded by undulating countryside, this is a wonderful place to live if you value the peacefulness and open green spaces of a country lifestyle. There is a network of quiet country lanes, green lanes and footpaths, all waiting to be explored as well as easy access to the local national parks and AONBs for day trips.

The village itself has a community run village shop which hosts a part time Post Office, a church and village hall which has a busy calendar of events including concerts and film nights as well as being home to local groups and clubs. On the edge of the village is the popular sports pavilion with recreational field and children’s play park.

The nearby village of Ingleton has Asda and Co-op stores as well as Seasons artisan bakery and café and Country Harvest food hall and café. Further afield, Kirkby Lonsdale and Settle both provide interesting high streets with a great collection of independent retailers and branches of regional favourite, Booths.

Step inside

As you'll be able to see from our floor plans, as two cottages, Sycamores and Beeches are remarkably similar in what they presently offer in terms of living accommodation. From a shared covered entrance, front doors lead straight into open plan living kitchens with space to cook, eat and relax; the kitchens come with fitted cabinets, sink units, ovens, hobs and fans over with space for fridges and plumbing for washing machines. Both living areas have attractive fire surrounds with electric fires fitted.

Both cottages provide a pair of generously proportioned double rooms that are all ensuite with either a bathroom, shower room or wet room. Both cottages were designed to have both ground and first floor bedrooms to appeal to holiday makers who possibly had mobility issues, indeed Sycamores takes it a stage further and has external ramp access and a wet room to enable wheelchair access.

Reflecting the rural setting, much emphasis been made internally on the use of natural wood – there are pine skirting boards, panel doors, architraves, double glazed window frames and wooden sills. Décor has purposefully been kept neutral, beneficial when letting out property, but it also means for an incoming owner occupier it is a blank canvas. TV and telephone points are in all bedrooms and the living areas too.

Where this all becomes really interesting is when one considers the potential to combine the two cottages and create one large house, there would be a spacious 2125 sq ft 197 sq m on offer. Again, referring to the floor plans it is easy to visualize where internal openings could be made to link the two, space would be gained by the removal of one staircase and the first floor could be rejigged to provide three or even four bedrooms. On the ground floor there is scope to create a fabulous and extensive open plan, contemporary living arrangement with space for a utility room, snug or office. What is now a covered shared porch could be fabulous glazed in to provide a garden room. All of course, subject to any necessary consents.

Opportunities to convert barns from scratch are increasingly rare as they have been popular for decades and so for buyers that are struggling to find such an opportunity, and also, for those that would be daunted by the idea of tackling a conversion from the very start, this is an excellent proposition. As two cottages, the barns are perfectly suitable for letting as they stand, but there is immense scope for upgrading, personalising and creating something very special for you and your family without the headaches of taking on an agricultural property straight from the farm and negotiating the whole conversion process. Enlist an architect and just imagine what wonders could be created!

Step outside

The property is bounded by traditional stone walls, there's a wooden gate off the lane making the outside area secure for dogs and younger children. The drive is laid with tarmac, the parking area delineated with limestone chippings, this extends around to a separate bay which would be ideal if you had a camper van or boat to park out of the way and use occasionally. Indian sandstone flags edged with stone sets form a path around the house and open out to a seating terrace to the west. Lawns border the paths with trees and shrubs creating privacy.

As former holiday cottages the garden areas were purposefully designed to be low fuss and require minimal maintenance, but of course all that could change! For horticulturally inclined buyers looking at this as one property there are super opportunities to landscape, adding in beds for herbaceous planting, even a greenhouse and raised beds if you wanted to try your hand at a degree of self-sufficiency. It's a blank canvas, waiting for an injection of colour, structure and seasonal interest.

Directions

what3words lines.comforced.optimists

Use Sat Nav LA6 3LZ with reference to the directions below:

Travelling from Lancaster/J34 M6 direction, head north up the Lune Valley on the A683. After travelling through Melling, as the road bears sharp left over Greta Bridge, turn right onto the A687 signposted Burton 3. Drive through Cantsfield and into Burton in Lonsdale. As you are leaving the village and proceed over the speed bumps, Barnoldswick Lane is first on the right. Follow the single track lane for around half a mile at which point it bears sharply round to the right. Continue and take the second drive on the left.

Services

Mains electricity. The external plant room houses the oil fired Worcester central heating boiler and the hot water storage tank.
