Guide Price £400,000 - £425,000

Set on Frenches Road, within easy walking distance of Redhill station, this three-bedroom Victorian semi-detached home combines period character with bright, well-presented interiors and a landscaped garden. Home to the current owners for the past seven years, it offers a welcoming space to settle into, with scope to introduce your own style over time.

The entrance hallway leads to a separate living room at the front, where a bay window brings in plenty of natural light. Plantation shutters offer privacy and a smart finish, complementing the character of the house. To the rear, the dining room provides a generous setting for everyday meals and entertaining, with the kitchen conveniently positioned beyond. A ground-floor bathroom sits at the back of the house, alongside useful storage.

Upstairs, three good-sized bedrooms offer flexibility for couples, families or those working from home. The principal bedroom spans the front of the house, with the second bedroom overlooking the rear and the third lending itself equally well to a bedroom, nursery or home office. Further storage is available off the landing.

Outside, the landscaped garden is designed to be easily maintained, providing an inviting space to enjoy without demanding too much upkeep. A combi boiler installed less than two years ago adds a practical benefit, while unrestricted on-street parking is available on Frenches Road.

Redhill's town centre and station are within easy walking distance, placing shops, cafés and direct rail links into London close at hand. It is a well-connected home with the character of a Victorian house and plenty of opportunity to make it your own.
