Location

Farden is a small hamlet sitting on the slopes of the Clee and a short 10 minute drive into historic Ludlow which is renowned for its architecture, culture and festivals. Clee Hill village is a short drive and has a good range of local amenities.

Accommodation

The property is approached into an entrance porch which opens into the living room with an attractive Inglenook fireplace with woodburning stove. Full of character with ceiling beams and timbers, kitchen/dining room fitted with a range of handmade units and includes an Esse electric stove and a Belfast style sink, ample room for table and chairs. Door then into a good size utility.

Hallway again with beamed ceiling, leads to sitting room (currently used by vendors as bedroom four) having double doors out onto the garden. There is also a rear porch and a useful shower room with modern suite that includes double width shower, wash hand basin and WC in white.

The first floor gives access to 3 good sized double bedrooms, a large house bathroom with suite in white of scroll edged bath, WC and wash hand basin. The bedroom at the rear opens onto a good sized balcony overlooking the gardens

Outside

Double opening gates onto a brick effect driveway which leads across the frontage and under a large carport sitting at the side of the house providing parking for numerous vehicles. Gardens and grounds with the property extend 0.4 of an acre and are mainly laid to lawn with stone edged borders and pathways. There is a sunken pond and a useful outbuilding having light and power fitted and measures internally 4.45 m x 4 m. The property also enjoys a small paddock area sitting at the front side of the house.

Agents Note

The current vendors live in the property next door and will be responsible for erecting a fence between the properties and between their field and the section of field that they are including in the sale.
