Church House is a Victorian chapel conversion constructed in 1892 of traditional brick beneath a high-pitched gable roof. The building retains a wealth of original architectural features including striking Gothic arched windows, exposed roof timbers and impressive internal proportions typical of chapel buildings of this period.

The property was thoughtfully converted by the previous owners to create well-balanced accommodation arranged over two floors while preserving much of the building's original character and architectural charm.

The layout provides generous reception space to the ground floor including a kitchen/dining room, study and shower room. To the first floor are three bedrooms and two bathrooms arranged around a characterful galleried landing, creating a distinctive and versatile living environment. The property benefits from oil-fired central heating, served by a Grant Eco Condenser 26/35 boiler installed in December 2024 and located within the kitchen.

The property is approached through an impressive Gothic arched timber double doorway framed by decorative brickwork and mature ivy, creating a striking and welcoming entrance.

The doors open into a characterful entrance vestibule featuring exposed brick walls, tiled flooring and a rooflight providing natural light. Retaining the building's historic chapel charm, arched internal timber doors lead to the main accommodation, while a door to the right provides access to the garage. From the vestibule an arched timber door opens into a welcoming reception hall featuring tiled flooring and a staircase rising to the first floor.

Natural light is provided by a window on the stairwell and doors lead to the principal ground floor accommodation.

A useful study or home office featuring a window providing natural light and an attractive arched recess with fitted shelving reflecting the character of the original chapel building. The room offers a practical space suitable for working from home, reading or additional reception use.

A spacious kitchen and dining room, fitted with a range of base units and work surfaces incorporating a sink positioned beneath a window overlooking the rear courtyard garden. A freestanding range-style cooker with gas connection is included, together with space for additional appliances.

The generous layout comfortably accommodates a dining table, making the space ideal for everyday family living and entertaining, while doors open directly onto the rear courtyard garden, providing plenty of natural light and convenient access to the outdoor seating area.

An impressive open-plan sitting room and dining area forming the principal living space of the property. The room is generously proportioned and enjoys an excellent sense of space, enhanced by a series of tall windows along the rear wall which reflect the building's original chapel design and allow good levels of natural light to fill the room.

A brick-built fireplace with inset gas fire provides an attractive focal point, creating a comfortable seating area within the space. The room features tiled flooring throughout and offers ample space for a range of lounge furniture while still retaining a light and open feel.

The layout flows naturally through a wide opening into the adjoining dining area, creating a bright and sociable environment well suited to both everyday living and entertaining, with plenty of space for both seating and dining arrangements.

Located to the rear of the ground floor accommodation is a spacious shower room fitted with a corner shower enclosure with electric shower, wash hand basin and low-level WC. The room benefits from natural light through two windows together with tiled flooring and part-tiled walls, creating a practical and convenient facility for guests or everyday use.

From the reception hall, a staircase with timber handrail and brick-built balustrade rises to the first floor, with natural light provided by a tall arched window reflecting the building's original architecture. The landing provides access to all first-floor rooms and offers space suitable for additional furniture or a small study area if required.
