About The Property

Looking for a detached three-bedroom bungalow with generous gardens, plenty of parking and well-balanced accommodation in a well-served village setting? This extended home in Penrhiwllan offers a practical single-storey layout, a wood burning stove, en-suite main bedroom, useful outside space and easy access to Cardigan Bay and the wider West Wales coast.

Set in the popular village of Penrhiwllan, this detached and extended bungalow offers a very appealing mix of practical space, comfortable room sizes and a garden that feels well established and usable. With off road parking for around four vehicles, secure fencing to the front and a generous plot wrapping around the property, it is the sort of home that should suit a range of buyers looking for single-storey living in West Wales.

The property is approached off a country road through a gated entrance onto a gravelled drive. The frontage is mostly given over to parking, which makes day-to-day life easy, while a lawned section softens the setting nicely. Gates lead through to the rear garden and a slate step rises to the front door.

Inside, the hallway gives a good first impression, with a useful airing cupboard, access to the attic and doors leading off to the main rooms. The layout works well, with the living accommodation set around the centre of the home and the bedrooms arranged to provide a good degree of separation.

The bathroom is fitted with a bath with hand held shower, wash hand basin and toilet, making it a practical family bathroom or main bathroom for guests.

Bedroom 1 is a double room positioned to the front of the property, with a pleasant outlook and enough space for the usual bedroom furniture.

Details Continued:

The kitchen is a good everyday space, fitted with matching wall and base units and finished with a tiled floor. There is an eye level Hotpoint electric oven and grill, gas hob, space and plumbing for a washing machine, space for a dishwasher and room for a freestanding fridge freezer. The wall mounted LPG combi boiler is also located here, and a timber stable door leads out to the side of the property, which is handy for coming and going from the garden.

The lounge is a particularly comfortable room, centred around a wood burning stove set on a slate hearth. Double doors open straight out to the rear garden, which helps the room feel nicely connected to the outside space and makes it an especially good room through the warmer months as well as in winter.

There is also a separate dining room, which adds flexibility and gives the bungalow a bit more shape than many standard layouts. It offers a useful second reception area for everyday meals, family gatherings or even a hobby space if needed. From here, a door leads through to the inner hall.

The extension has clearly added a lot to the overall appeal of the property. The main bedroom is a very well proportioned room with plenty of space around the bed and double doors leading out to the side garden, reached via steps. There is also an en-suite shower room fitted with a double shower, toilet and vanity wash hand basin, which is a very practical addition and gives the property a more flexible arrangement for couples, family living or visiting guests.

Bedroom 3 is a decent single and benefits from fitted double wardrobes, so it works well as a child's room, guest room or study depending on requirements.

Externally:

Outside, the garden is one of the stronger parts of the property. Off the kitchen there is a patio area which is well placed for sitting out with a cuppa and catching the sun. This is also where the gas bottle connections for the boiler and hob are located. From here the space opens into the rear garden, which is mainly lawned and arranged with patio seating areas, pretty borders and established planting. Two useful garden sheds provide extra storage, and the archway and paths add a bit of character to the outside space without making it feel fussy.

The garden continues around to a further side area where the original well can still be found. It is covered over and has a hand pump installed, although this is noted as needing repair. There is also a gravelled section with beds and paths leading to the doors from the main bedroom, along with an outside tap. Altogether, the outside space feels manageable but still generous, with enough variety to appeal to anyone wanting room for gardening, sitting out or simply having a bit more space around the bungalow.

This is a bungalow with a lot going for it: good room sizes, a sensible layout, useful extension, strong outside space and a village setting with genuine amenities. For anyone looking for single-storey living without feeling short on space, this one is well worth a closer look.
