Dating back to the 19th century, this distinctive double-fronted period home retains a wealth of character and historic features, whilst having been thoughtfully updated to provide a comfortable and stylish home. The attractive red-brick façade, traditional detailing and handsome proportions create a particularly appealing first impression.

Inside, the property combines character and practicality beautifully, with well-proportioned living spaces, exposed timbers and feature fireplaces complemented by a superb open-plan breakfast kitchen. Oak herringbone flooring, shaker-style cabinetry and contemporary fittings sit comfortably alongside the property's original features, creating a warm and welcoming home with plenty of individuality. Further recent improvements include a brand new boiler, which benefits from a five-year warranty.

The property also retains a fascinating piece of its history in the form of the original bakehouse, situated to the rear and accessed via the shared gated driveway. With the original oven still in place beneath its traditional Swithland slate roof, the building provides a wonderful reminder of the property's former use and also benefits from power and lighting. Outside, the mature private rear garden provides a peaceful and attractive setting, whilst the property's position within Belton places village amenities and the surrounding countryside within easy reach.

A useful guest cloakroom and access to the rear courtyard add to the practicality of the ground floor. The first floor provides three generous double bedrooms, together with a beautifully refitted bathroom featuring a claw-foot bath, bespoke vanity unit, WC and attractive mosaic tiled flooring.

Gardens and land:

The property is approached via a gated shared driveway and courtyard, providing access to the original bakehouse and one neighbouring property, together with off-road parking.
