Set within one of Dorset's most historically significant buildings, The Admiral's Quarters is a unique two-storey residential apartment located on the first and second floor of the Old Mill on Mill Street, Corfe Mullen. This exceptional Grade II listed former watermill is believed to date back to 1086, with the Admiralty Connection believed to be in 1714. The building is recognised as potentially the oldest and largest watermill in the county, and has been carefully evolved over the centuries.

Converted from this landmark building, The Admiral's Quarters combines a strong sense of heritage with bespoke residential living. The apartment draws inspiration from the mill's historic riverside setting, with interiors that evoke the character and craftsmanship of a traditional galleon, creating a distinctive and atmospheric home unlike any other.

The accommodation is arranged over two floors and offers flexible, well-proportioned living space suited to full-time residence. Residents benefit from two allocated parking spaces and access to shared communal gardens, providing a tranquil outdoor setting that complements the mill's waterside surroundings.

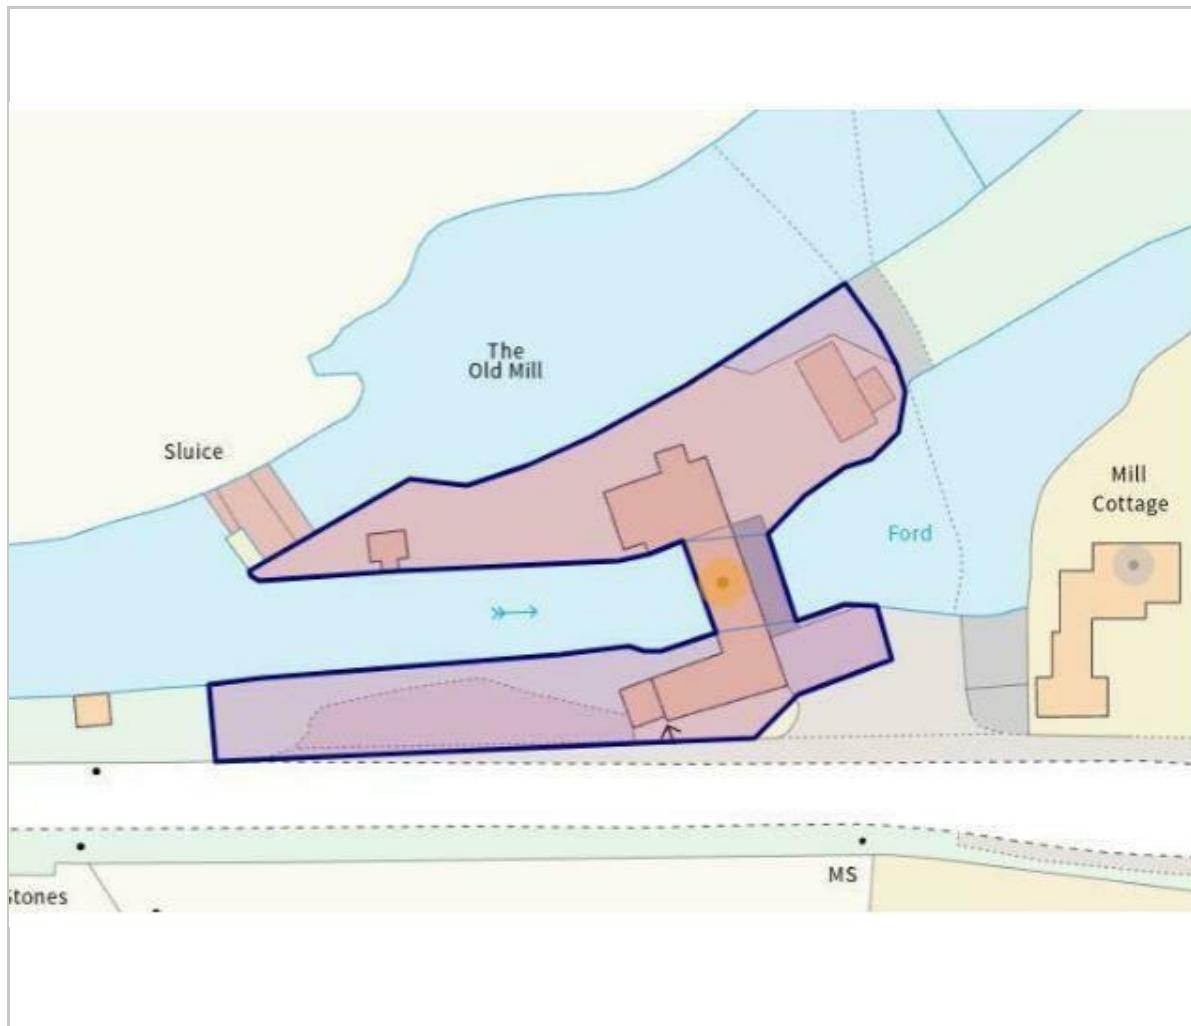

The Old Mill itself was thoughtfully enlarged during the 18th and 19th centuries and has more recently been adapted to provide a range of residential and holiday accommodation, ensuring its continued use and preservation. The Admiral's Quarters now represents an opportunity to own a private residence within this important piece of local heritage.

Offered on a 125-year leasehold, this remarkable apartment is ideally suited to those seeking a characterful home with history at its heart, set within the charming village of Corfe Mullen and within easy reach of Wimborne and surrounding countryside.
