The kitchen and breakfast room

The kitchen is the heart of the home, combining traditional materials with modern practicality. A timber arch frames the entrance from the living space, while exposed beams remind you of the building's origins. Bespoke cabinets with glass-fronted wall units and wooden worktops surround a peninsula that incorporates a sink with views out over the grounds. A range cooker with stainless-steel splashback and extractor hood complements the space and there is room for additional appliances.

The living and dining area

This impressive open-plan room is designed for everyday living and entertaining. A wood burning stove on a raised hearth provides a focal point, and French doors act as another entrance to the property. Wide windows frame countryside views and the wood-effect floor continues seamlessly from the kitchen.

The gym and mezzanine level

Currently utilised as a home gym, this space provides a flexible additional reception room with wood-effect flooring and two windows providing natural light and ventilation. A wooden ladder rises to a mezzanine level enclosed by a glass balustrade; this cosy loft area benefits from a small window, creating an ideal spot for hobbies or relaxation.

The study

Tucked away off the main living area, the study provides a quiet setting for working from home. It features a large window overlooking the garden and open countryside, with ample room for furnishings.

The utility and cloakroom

Serving as the main entrance to the house, this space functions as a practical utility and boot room. A slate-tiled floor, built-in cupboards and a curtained recess with space for a washing machine and dryer keep everyday essentials organised, while coat hooks provide space for outdoor gear. Adjacent is the cloakroom, fitted with a mosaic-topped basin, heated towel rail and low-level WC.

The principal bedroom and en suite

The principal bedroom enjoys generous proportions and a vaulted ceiling accented by exposed beams. A large window fills the room with countryside views and there is a sleek vertical radiator mounted against the wall. The adjoining en suite shower room is fitted with a walk-in rainfall shower with marble-effect tiling, a contemporary vanity unit with integrated basin and drawers, and a WC.

The second bedroom and mezzanine

A distinctive bedroom arranged across two levels, this space makes full use of the building's character. Exposed timber beams frame the vaulted ceiling and a ladder provides access to the upper mezzanine level. Below, a built-in storage cupboard and a large window defines the main sleeping area. The mezzanine, enclosed by a timber balustrade, offers additional sleeping or storage space beneath sloping ceilings.

The third bedroom

A vaulted ceiling with timber beams and a Velux window gives this bedroom a sense of volume, and a glazed door opens to a Juliet balcony with iron balustrade. The wood-effect floor and vertical radiator mirror the style of the other rooms, while a rustic ledged and braced door gives access to built-in storage for added convenience.

The fourth and fifth bedrooms

Two further bedrooms provide versatile accommodation across different layouts. Both the fourth and fifth bedrooms have vaulted ceilings, each with exposed beams and windows set into the eaves overlooking the surrounding land. Both rooms are served by the family bathroom and offer flexibility for guests or family use.

The family bathroom

The family bathroom is finished with contemporary fittings and a calm palette. A free-standing bath sits adjacent to a low window with countryside views, complemented by a large walk-in shower enclosed by glass and lined with marble-effect tiling. A floating vanity unit provides storage and a WC completes the arrangement.

The garden

A broad stone terrace wraps around the side of the home, creating an ideal setting for alfresco dining. Brick walls and retaining planters define the space and steps lead down to rolling lawns bordered by mature trees and hedges. A wildlife pond is edged with rocks and aquatic plants, with a weeping willow providing natural shade and a brick path winding past ornamental planting.

Beyond the terrace, the gardens open onto areas of orchard and parkland lawn. Several timber outbuildings, including a hay store, workshop, garden shed and log store, offer practical storage for gardening equipment and livestock. Wildflower borders and established shrubs bring colour through the seasons, and the elevated position affords panoramic views over the surrounding countryside.

The land

Contributing to the three acres, two fenced paddocks gently slope down towards the river, fringed by mature trees, and because the main house sits on higher ground it remains well above the floodplain. There is separate gated agricultural access to the field, and the paddocks are currently grazed, making them well suited to ponies or small livestock.

The driveway and parking

A private drive approaches the house and sweeps around to a gravel parking area. A timber-framed two-bay carport/workshop with pitched roof provides covered parking and incorporates water and electricity; stairs lead up to a versatile room above that could serve as a games room or studio. The drive offers space for multiple vehicles and there is easy access to the outbuildings and paddocks.

Area: 3 acres

Location

Set within unspoilt countryside yet easily accessible, Eastham Kiln lies on the edge of the village of Eastham and is approximately five miles from the market town of Tenbury Wells. The area is known for its rolling hills, woodland and productive farmland, offering plenty of opportunities for walking, riding and fishing. Local amenities include a community shop and primary school in nearby villages, while Tenbury Wells provides a range of independent shops, supermarkets and public houses. For those commuting further afield, road links connect to Ludlow, Worcester and the wider motorway network; a choice of state and independent schools are found in the surrounding towns and Worcester railway stations provide services to Birmingham and London.
