The Neighbourhood

Bloomsbury

Bloomsbury is a little slice of bohemian paradise in the heart of London, historic streets lined with handsome Georgian townhouses, leafy garden squares and a vibe that oozes culture & creativity.

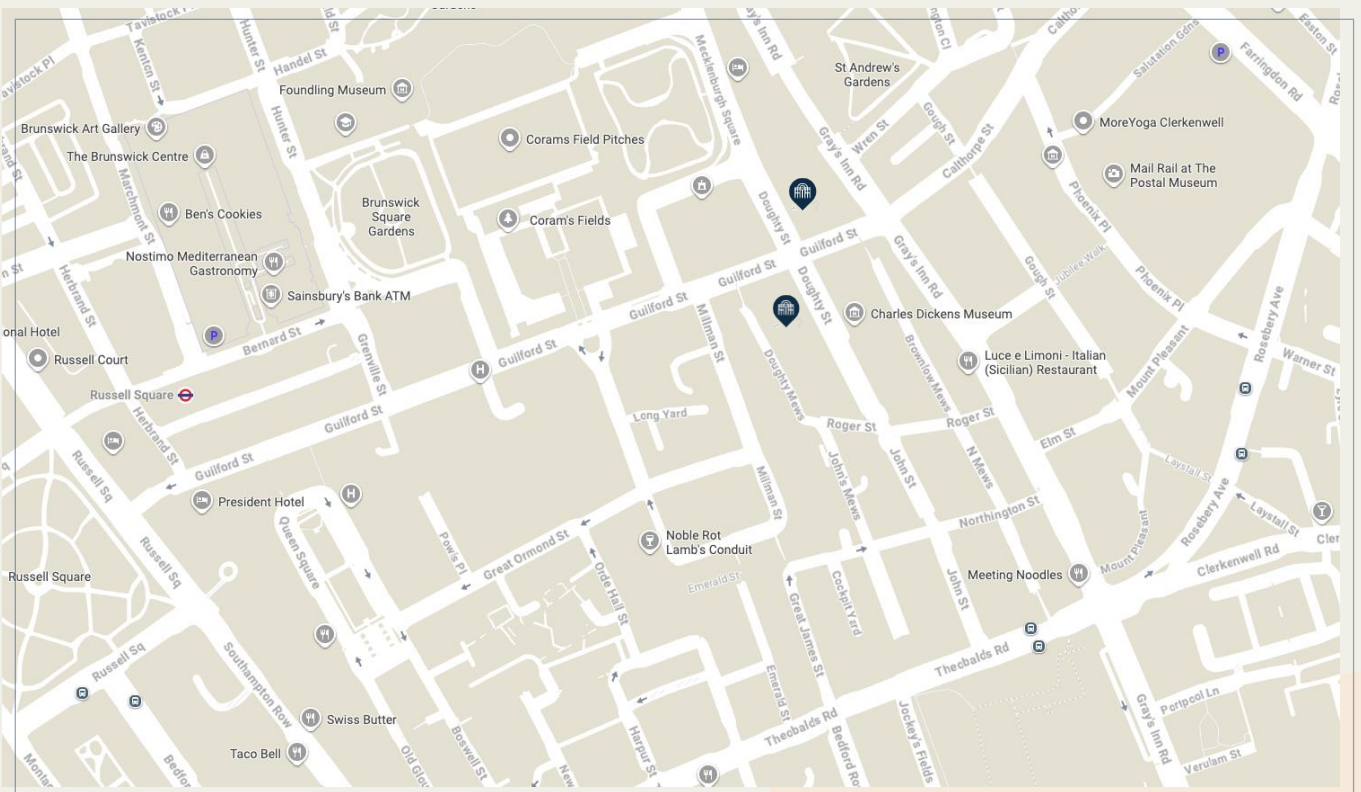

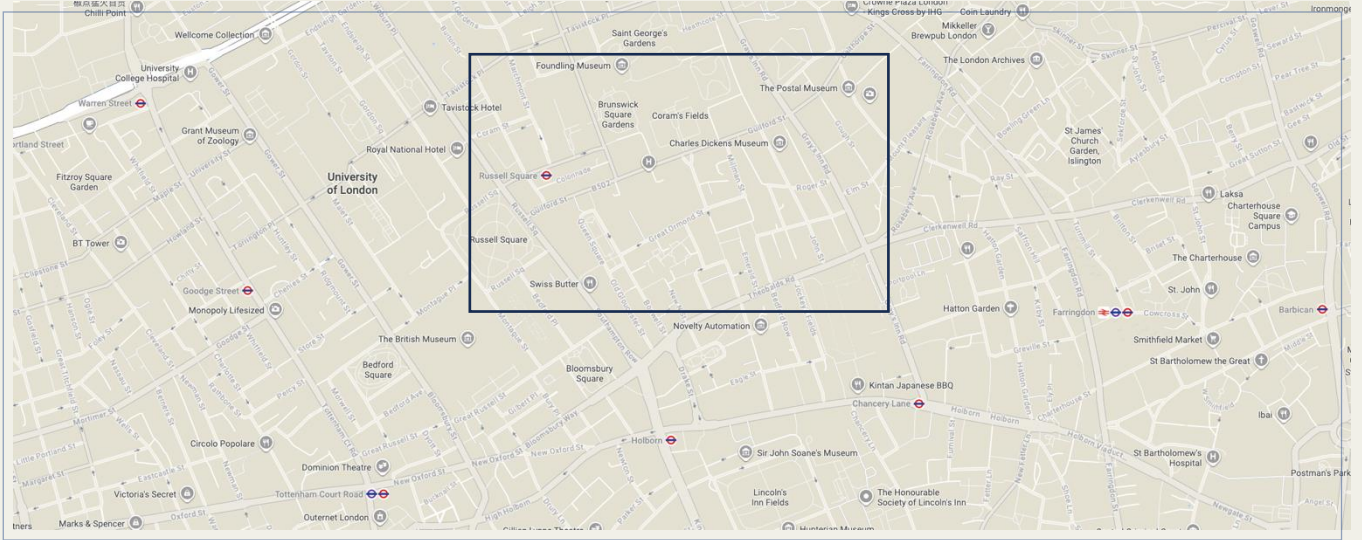

One of central London's quieter pockets, but Bloomsbury doesn't lack charisma. Historically a home for the city's intellectual & cultural elite, people are still drawn to Bloomsbury by the world class museums, learning institutions and proximity to both the City & West End, but stay for the vibey lifestyle, plentiful green spaces and genuine village feel.

Garden squares include Bloomsbury Square, Bedford Square and Russell Square with its wonderful open space and the family run Italian Caffe Tropea as well as the large recreational space at Coram's Fields, all give the neighbourhood an open and leafy vibe.

With an eclectic mix of Georgian, Victorian and modernist architecture, quaint mews and garden squares, every street has its own identity. From the independent shops of Store Street to the contemporary fashion boutiques, restaurants & coffee shops that line Lambs Conduit Street and the Brutalist Brunswick Centre with its independent cinema & varied retailers, Bloomsbury really does offer something for everyone.
