TENURE & COUNCIL TAX BAND

Leasehold - Purchasers must ask their legal advisor to confirm the Tenure.

Title contains restrictions or restrictive covenants

Here is a summary but a property lawyer can advise further: - Charge consent restriction (registered 17 November 2023): No transfer, sale or new mortgage of the leasehold title can be registered without the written consent of National Westminster Bank PLC (the holder of the charge dated 17 November 2023). In plain terms: you cannot legally register a sale or create another mortgage on this title unless the bank whose mortgage is registered first signs a written consent allowing it. - Restrictive covenants (in the charges register) — these run until 1 March 2060 and are obligations affecting the land that the leaseholder must follow. Key points a buyer must note: - You must not erect extra buildings or structures on the site except with prior written approval of the landlord's architect; small garden huts/greenhouses up to 8ft x 5ft x 7ft at the rear boundary are allowed if not visible from the public road. - You must not make external alterations or any work affecting the stability of the building except with prior written approval of the landlord's architect. - The site must be used as a single private house for one family only; most trades, businesses, teaching of music, sale of alcohol, or keeping animals (other than household cats or dogs) are prohibited (some professional offices like doctors or solicitors may be allowed). - No act that is or may be a danger, nuisance or annoyance to the landlord, other occupiers or the public. - If local authorities require sight lines at road corners, nothing exceeding two feet in height may be placed in front of the sight line. These are "restrictive covenants" — promises about what you cannot do with the property. - Alienation/registration exception note (register entry): The register records that any rights or claims that arise from dealings made in breach of the lease's prohibitions against certain transfers may be excluded from the protection of registration. In simple terms: if someone carried out a transfer or other dealing in breach of the lease terms, that dealing might not be protected on the register and could have consequences for those dealing with the title.

Title contains beneficial rights or easements

Here is a summary but a property lawyer can advise further:- No specific rights or easements (for example a private right of way or a right to use common parts) are specifically described on the public register for this title. The register does say that the title "includes any legal easements granted by the registered lease but is subject to any rights that are granted or reserved by the said lease and affect the registered land." In plain English: the lease may grant or reserve rights (access, use of communal areas, etc.) but those rights are not detailed on the title summary — you must read the lease and the filed plan to see any actual rights or obligations affecting the flat.
