About The Property

An exceptionally spacious modern house, offering huge potential to improve and alter to create further accommodation or a self contained annex over either one or two floors, backing onto open fields and set on the edge of the village.

Built some 40 years ago and in the same family since, the plot is enclosed to three sides by timber fencing with wire and hedging to rear to allow open views over the fields behind. There is ample gravel parking to the front and space for further garaging if required. The garden extends to all sides, mainly laid to lawn with mature shrubs.

The accommodation consists of entrance hall, cloakroom, dining room, kitchen, utility room, triple aspect sitting room with open fireplace and conservatory to the ground floor. On the first floor are three double bedrooms, single bedroom, family bathroom and ensuite shower room. On the second floor is a large loft room with window and velux windows, ready for conversion subject to the usual regs. Bedroom 3 is a really good size and a shower room could easily be created from part of it.

The double garage is attached to the west side of the house and could easily be converted and incorporated into the main house. The oil boiler is housed here. Solar panels are producing approximately £1,000 per annum.

Location

Chitterne is a characterful and welcoming village nestled in the Wylie Valley, with the Chitterne Brook meandering past its ancient church and through the heart of the community. Lying on the southern edge of Salisbury Plain, much of the surrounding land is owned by the Ministry of Defence, lending the village its unique rural character—complete with occasional tank crossing signs. Despite its remote feel, Chitterne is far from isolated, with a strong sense of local heritage and community spirit. The village hall hosts regular events, and there's a large recreation field with sports facilities and a play area, making this a lively and close-knit place to call home.
