The property nestles mid-terrace between its neighbours, a pretty double-fronted flint cottage with red-brick detailing around the windows and a decorative pitched porch over the central door. A carved brick announces the date of construction – 1847. In front, a wide gravel driveway sets the house nicely back from the road while providing off-street parking for two vehicles.

Step inside.

Nowhere is the cramped dark interior you might expect. What were probably once two small rooms and a central hall is now a luminous, laterally stretched white space with an elegant light-reflecting oak laminate floor, the only sign of any former configuration the solitary structural column and beam in the centre of the room. At one end, an original brick fireplace with oak lintel is beautifully set off by the modern white décor around it. The hearth houses a woodburning stove, providing a cosy focus in colder months. One side of the fireplace is open, leading to a utility and downstairs cloakroom.

At the other end of the room, a stunning modern staircase, open underneath, maximises the dimensions of the space. Its unique glass balustrade displays the name of the cottage etched the glass. Two windows and a glass front door face west, allowing sunlight all afternoon and evening into this spacious and relaxing room. What was once an original rear window at the back of the house is now retained as an internal window looking into the extension, allowing light to travel across the building.

A wide opening joins this living room to the extended living space behind, just outside the original rear wall. This splendid kitchen-dining room easily accommodates an L-shaped kitchen at one end – white units beneath a butcher-block counter – plus either a seating or an extended dining area at the other end. A feature flint wall, once the rear elevation, has now been incorporated into the interior of this stylish home. At nearly 30 feet long, this is a room with many options. French doors lead to the garden.

KEY FEATURES

Up the glass-sided staircase, you'll come to a landing running along the back of the house. Two generous bedrooms are up here, one with a large built-in cupboard and the other bedroom also has a useful built-in cupboard. Both bedrooms have exposed structural beams hinting that parts of this bijou home might be older than the date on the entrance brick suggests.

Between these bedrooms is a luxurious bathroom featuring a large double-ended tub and a separate shower stall. All finished in natural colours – taupe boxcar siding, white walls and a smart wood-effect floor – this glorious space is the perfect spot to relax at the end of the day.

The garden, completely dog-proof, is a low-maintenance haven laid to grass and paving. A separate wood-frame summer house, over 230 square feet, beautifully finished and with a basic kitchen, presents a wonderful opportunity for a home office or perhaps a studio space. A gate at the end of the garden gives access to the rear of the property.

"It's a lovely, helpful community," says the owner of Wattisfield which she is sorry to be leaving. A dog owner, she has also greatly appreciated the country walks right out of the front door.
