What The Owner Says:

"We have loved living here for almost 2 decades and bought this house because of its central location. It's close to Brighton Station (which was perfect for us as we used to work in London) whilst being ideal for everything Brighton has to offer. The North Laine shops, restaurants and pubs are all just a short walk away, the beach is close and the new Ikea at Churchill Square is so convenient. Centurion Road is surprisingly quiet and peaceful and the house itself has large, bright rooms and the courtyard garden is an oasis on a summery day."

Outside, the public twitten at the end of Centurion Road provides a handy everyday shortcut into town – a well-known local advantage that residents here quietly appreciate. St Nicholas Church and its pretty gardens are immediately adjacent, hosting events during the Brighton Festival and throughout the year, while the North Laine, the seafront and the city's restaurant and bar scene are all within comfortable walking distance.
