Formerly St Saviour's Chapel, an integral part of the old Oakwood Hospital, the magnificent building has become a simply glorious home. The features here have been so carefully preserved, from the columns and arches through to the windows and the high beamed ceilings. As soon as you step in you are struck by the beauty of the carved stone and the stained-glass windows. Yet the conversion lends itself to day-to-day living as well. This is a great place to spend time and a wonderful home to entertain in.

The main living area in the Grade II Listed building is open plan. One section, which still retains its original panelling, has been made into a drawing room area. A few steps up, beneath the great vaulted and beamed ceiling is where the large stained-glass window is. Coloured light streams through the image of Jesus the Comforter in deep reds, blues, greens and golds. The window has a Victorian style and was given by staff and patients at the hospital.
