Newton St Cyres has long been one of the most sought after villages between Crediton and Exeter, and it's easy to see why. With regular rail and bus links to both towns, it offers the balance of village life and convenience perfectly. There's a real sense of community too, helped by the village amenities which include Belluno Italian restaurant and bar, the locally renowned Beer Engine pub, sports clubs and the beautiful arboretum, a wonderful place to walk throughout the year.

Little Pickwicks is found within West Town, a quiet country lane tucked away just off the centre of the village, running alongside a small brook. It's a lovely setting and exactly the sort of location many buyers picture when thinking of a Devon cottage.

The house itself is Grade II listed, built of traditional cob beneath a thatched roof, and has clearly been enjoyed as a home for many years. While it would now benefit from some updating, the fundamentals are all there and it offers an exciting opportunity for a new owner to gradually make it their own.

Inside, there's plenty of character throughout with two reception rooms on the ground floor, both enjoying the charm expected from a cottage of this age and type. Along the rear is the kitchen/dining room which overlooks the garden and offers good everyday living space.

Upstairs are three bedrooms including the master with ensuite and plenty of built-in storage, along with the family bathroom.

Outside, the gardens rise behind the cottage in tiers, creating different seating and planting areas with access from both floors of the property. A particularly useful addition is the substantial open timber store which could lend itself to a range of hobbies or potentially work from home space, subject to any necessary permissions or alterations.

Another major advantage is the garage and off-road parking to the side, something increasingly valuable in village locations such as this.

Overall, this is a rare chance to secure a genuine Devon cottage in one of the area's standout villages, offering huge potential in a truly lovely setting.
