Agents Notes

Title MM39925 contains beneficial rights or easements

Here is a summary but a property lawyer can advise further:-

Title register restrictions (MM39925):

- Under a 1983 agreement, the owner must not build any structures or plant trees near the electricity lines without getting approval from the electricity board first.
- The owner is not allowed to raise or lower the ground levels in a way that would interfere with the electricity company's equipment.
- The property does not have a legal right to 'light or air', which means the owner cannot automatically stop a neighbour from building something that might block their light or airflow.
- The property does not have a right of way over the private road that runs along part of its western boundary.

The electricity company has the right to enter the land to install, repair, and maintain electricity lines, including poles and underground cables.

A previous owner and the local corporation have the right to use any roads built on the property and to lay or maintain sewers, pipes, and cables under the land.

The property benefits from various rights (such as access for repairs) that were originally set out in a 1984 lease and a 2014 transfer document.
