GENERAL COMMENTS AND REMARKS

The Anchorage is an exceptional semi-detached character residence, occupying a truly enviable position within one of Cornwall's most picturesque and highly prized waterside villages. Sympathetically extended in 2006, the property now combines traditional charm with a striking contemporary wing, carefully designed to maximise light, space and—most notably—one of the area's most iconic outlooks across the tidal waters to Ferryside Cottage, the wooded banks of St Michael Penkivel and the historic Tregothnan Estate beyond.

The setting is quite superb. Positioned at the heart of Malpas, yet enjoying a remarkable sense of privacy, the property offers an ever-changing waterside panorama that is both peaceful and captivating throughout the seasons. The proximity to the river, combined with the village's renowned safe anchorage and mooring facilities, makes The Anchorage particularly appealing to sailing and boating enthusiasts, while the surrounding Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty provides an idyllic backdrop for walking, wildlife and outdoor pursuits.

Internally, the house is notable for its versatility as well as its generous proportions. The layout lends itself equally well to comfortable family living, multigenerational occupation or the creation of a self-contained apartment, offering excellent potential for holiday letting. The contemporary extension has been thoughtfully planned to function independently if required, while still integrating seamlessly with the original house.

Arranged over two floors, the accommodation is complemented by a substantial garage, driveway parking and additional rented parking and storage opposite the property—an increasingly rare and valuable asset in this sought-after location. Properties of this calibre, offering such flexibility, architectural interest and a waterside village setting within minutes of Truro, are exceptionally scarce. The Anchorage therefore represents a rare opportunity to acquire a distinctive and highly adaptable home in one of Cornwall's most desirable riverfront communities.
