DESCRIPTION:

Standing proudly on the corner of Station Road, this remarkable Grade II Listed Victorian Water Tower is one of Faversham's most distinctive buildings. Originally constructed around 1858 to serve the London, Chatham & Dover Railway, this architectural gem has been transformed into an extraordinary home offering over 1,200 sq.ft. of characterful accommodation arranged across three fascinating floors, crowned by a spectacular roof terrace with panoramic views across the rooftops of one of Kent's most sought-after market towns.

The handsome stock brick façade, framed by decorative red brick arches and magnificent full-height arched windows, hints at its industrial heritage while creating an aesthetic that feels equally at home in London's warehouse districts as it does in historic Faversham. It is bold, elegant and completely unique.

Inside, the property is every bit as impressive. Soaring ceilings, vast arched windows that flood each floor with natural light, original architectural detailing and a beautiful cast-iron spiral staircase combine to create interiors unlike anything else currently available on the market. Every level offers a different perspective, making the house feel both inspiring and endlessly versatile.

Solid oak entrance doors open into a welcoming hallway where the principal staircase rises to the upper floors. The ground floor currently offers a spacious reception room/bedroom with French doors opening directly onto the gardens, together with a bathroom.

The first floor continues the sense of volume with a fitted kitchen alongside another substantial open-plan living space, centred around the striking cast-iron spiral staircase that climbs to a mezzanine bedroom tucked beneath the original water tank. From here, a ladder staircase leads to what is undoubtedly the property's showpiece — an incredible roof terrace where uninterrupted views stretch across Faversham's historic skyline, providing an unforgettable setting for morning coffee, evening drinks or simply watching the town below. Outside, the lifestyle is just as appealing. Unlike many character conversions, The Water Tower enjoys small gardens to both the east and west, off-road parking adds further practicality to this wonderfully individual home.

The Water Tower is not simply a house; it is an opportunity. Whether envisioned as a dramatic private residence, an inspirational artist's studio, a creative workspace, an exceptional holiday let or a truly memorable weekend retreat, the flexibility of the accommodation offers enormous scope for a buyer with imagination.

There remains exciting potential to further enhance the interiors while celebrating the building's extraordinary industrial heritage (STPC).
