Description

Set back from the road, this four-bedroom, 18th-century home offers more than simply a place to live; it offers a way of life. Approached through a beautiful country garden, the house has an immediate sense of calm — a welcome escape from the busy pace of everyday life.

The character of the house lies in its authenticity. Original features, time-worn textures and rustic details reflect its long history, while the rooms have a warmth that makes them feel thoroughly lived in. The kitchen, with its characterful apex beams, is very much the heart of the home: a place for baking, making, gathering and sharing the ordinary moments of family life. Alongside it are a sitting room, study and snug, providing spaces for both conversation and quieter moments, while a useful utility room takes care of the practicalities.

Outside, the garden feels like a natural continuation of the house. There is space for children to explore, for adults to sit and enjoy the changing seasons, and for projects to take shape, with a number of outbuildings offering further potential. Whether it is a barefoot morning on the grass, an afternoon spent tending the garden or simply listening to the sounds of the countryside, there is a pleasing sense of space and freedom here.

As evening falls, the house takes on a different character. The glow of a roaring fire brings everyone together, creating a warm and comfortable setting for long conversations, shared meals and the simple pleasure of being at home.

The Grade II listed house is situated in the village of Upton, within a close-knit community where family life and connection remain an important part of daily life. The village fête, evenings at the pub, afternoons around the cricket ground and carols on the green are all part of a rhythm that has endured over generations.

This is what lifestyle means here. It is not rushed or curated, but wholesome and rooted. A life shaped by simple pleasures, where the past is honoured and the present enjoyed.
