LOCATION

Little Houghton has been occupied since prehistoric times with stone hand-axes, flint tools and arrowheads unearthed within the parish. Unfortunately two fires, in 1333 and 1780, destroyed most of the village leaving a legend that this is the cause of the reddened stones still seen in cottage walls here. Located 2 miles south of Northampton just off the A428 Bedford Road (which also separates it from Great Houghton), the village has a public house/restaurant, and its own primary school. Other nearby facilities include hotels, pub/restaurants, large supermarkets and Delapre public golf course which has both 18 and 9 hole courses as well as a driving range and equipment shop. For commuters, M1 junction 15 is only 6 miles away and for public transport a daily bus services (excluding Sunday) runs to Northampton where the station offers mainline services to both Birmingham New Street and London Euston.
