About The Property

Bryn-Y-Wawr is a substantial detached four-bedroom home in Coed Y Bryn, offering an impressive amount of flexible accommodation alongside a generous garage, extensive driveway parking and an established rear garden. With approximately 221.4 sq m of overall space shown on the floor plan, this is a home with plenty of room for everyday family life, working from home, hobbies and visiting family and friends.

The property has an interesting layout that gives the ground floor two particularly useful living areas rather than relying on one main reception room. To one side is the lounge/dining room, and running much of the depth of the house. This provides plenty of space to create separate sitting and dining areas while still keeping the room connected. A bay window at the front adds character, while glazed doors at the rear provide a direct connection with the garden.

Alongside this is the kitchen/living area. The proportions make this another very versatile part of the house, combining the kitchen with space for informal seating or everyday dining. Bottled gas is used for cooking, while the property benefits from oil-fired central heating.

A separate laundry room sits just off the main accommodation and provides useful additional space away from the kitchen, with access to the outside. There is also a ground-floor WC, while the central hallway links the different parts of the ground floor and houses the staircase to the first floor.

Upstairs, the accommodation continues to offer a good degree of flexibility. There are four bedrooms in total, together with a separate office, family bathroom and en-suite shower room.

Three further bedrooms provide options for family members, guests or additional hobby space. The family bathroom serves these rooms.

One of the especially useful additions is the separate first-floor office. , it provides a dedicated workspace without sacrificing one of the four bedrooms. For anyone working partly or fully from home, this is a practical feature and allows work and living areas to remain separate.

For buyers needing a home with more space than the average four-bedroom property, Bryn-Y-Wawr has several features that set it apart. The combination of two substantial ground-floor living areas, four bedrooms, a separate office, two bathrooms, laundry room, substantial garage and extensive parking makes the accommodation adaptable to different stages of family life.

Bryn-Y-Wawr is a home where the overall amount of usable space really stands out, both inside and out. Viewing is recommended to appreciate the proportions of the accommodation, the garage and parking, and the garden setting.

Externally:
Outside, Bryn-Y-Wawr continues to offer plenty of usable space. A broad tarmac driveway sits to the front of the house and provides off-road parking for several vehicles, with space that appears capable of comfortably accommodating around four to five cars depending on their size and positioning.

The garage is another notable feature, it offers considerably more space than a typical single garage and is currently arranged to accommodate a vehicle alongside workshop and storage areas. It could suit anyone needing room for bikes, outdoor equipment, tools or a hobby space, while retaining garaging. A roller-style garage door provides vehicular access from the driveway.

The front boundary is softened by established shrubs and planting, helping to break up the generous parking area, while the rear garden has clearly been cared for and provides a good balance between greenery and places to sit outside.

The main garden is predominantly grass with planted borders containing a mixture of mature shrubs and established plants. Raised timber edging helps define the different levels, and steps connect the garden with the pathway alongside the house. Towards the far side are paved and timber decked seating areas, providing space for outdoor furniture and dining. The garden backs towards open countryside, giving the outside space an attractive rural outlook.

Altogether, the outside arrangement feels manageable while still providing enough room for gardening, outdoor seating and general family use. Direct external access from different parts of the ground floor also makes the garden feel well connected to the house.
