About The Property

Looking for a detached bungalow with a modern finish, generous gardens and a tucked-away setting near the Cardigan Bay coast? This well-kept 2-bedroom home in Gilfachrheda combines easy single-storey living with a surprisingly spacious plot, all within easy reach of New Quay and the beaches of West Wales.

Set back within its plot and surrounded by mature greenery, this detached bungalow has a really pleasant feel from the moment of arrival. The exterior has been updated with smart dark grey trims and gravelled parking areas, while the garden gives the property a sense of space that is often hard to find with bungalows of this size. The backdrop of trees and established planting adds to the setting, creating a home that feels tucked away yet still conveniently positioned for access to New Quay and the wider West Wales coastline.

The accommodation flows well and feels bright throughout. The entrance opens into a hallway with patterned tiled flooring and natural wood internal doors, setting the tone for the rest of the property. Off the hallway are doors leading to the bedrooms, bathroom and main living accommodation.

The lounge/diner is undoubtedly the standout room in the house. It is a surprisingly generous space with a vaulted ceiling and exposed beam creating height and character, while the wood flooring and neutral décor keep the room feeling warm and comfortable. A wood burning stove set on a tiled hearth provides a lovely focal point and gives the room a cosy atmosphere during the colder months. There is ample room for both living and dining furniture, and the sliding doors opening directly onto the gravelled seating area help connect the inside with the garden outside. Natural light comes in well from multiple directions, making it a room that works equally well during the day or evening.

Leading from the living space is the kitchen, which has been fitted in a modern shaker style with cream units, wooden worktops and contrasting dark tiled splashbacks. The patterned flooring gives the room a contemporary edge while still fitting nicely with the overall style of the property. There is space for appliances along with integrated cooking facilities and useful storage. A side door gives direct access outside, handy for everyday use and garden access.

The bathroom is fitted with a curved panel bath with shower over, WC and wash hand basin, finished with tiled walls and glass block detailing which helps bring additional natural light into the room.

Bedroom one is the larger of the two bedrooms. It is a comfortable double room with a calm, neutral finish. Bedroom two is a smaller room currently used as a study and occasional bedroom, making it useful for guests, home working or hobbies, depending on requirements and enjoys a pleasant outlook over the garden.

Outside, the grounds are one of the biggest selling points of the property. The bungalow sits comfortably within the plot with gravelled pathways and seating areas wrapping around the house, alongside a generous lawned garden bordered by attractive stone walls and fencing. The garden has plenty of usable outdoor space for seating, gardening, or simply enjoying the surroundings. The elevated wooded backdrop gives the whole setting a sheltered and established feel.

The gravelled driveway provides off-road parking for several vehicles, and there is good access around the property for maintenance and storage. The overall plot feels manageable while still giving enough outdoor space to properly enjoy.

Gilfachrheda itself is a handy location just outside the popular seaside town of New Quay, known for its harbour, beaches, pubs, cafes and regular dolphin spotting along the Cardigan Bay coastline. The wider area of West Wales continues to attract buyers looking for a slower pace of life, coastal scenery and access to outdoor activities, with nearby coastal paths, beaches and countryside all within easy reach.
