- Leytonstone tube station is just over a half mile on foot for the Zone 3 Central line, putting Liverpool Street just fourteen minutes away direct.

➤➤ IF YOU LIVED HERE

You'll be curling up in a glorious double bedroom, sat to the front, incorporating that lovely bay window and coming in at over 200 square feet. A bank of floor to ceiling wardrobes sit opposite striking statement wallpaper and a vintage hearth and mantel, while inbetween original timber floorboards flow underfoot and a classic ceiling rose with pendulum lighting sits overhead.

Next door is your sleek, gleaming kitchen, decked out in eggshell blue cabinets, topped with brass fittings and white marbled countertops. Classic white metro tiling sits on the backsplash as well as in the open hearth and surround opposite. Head through a similarly stylish utility space for your bathroom, metro tiled from floor to ceiling and decked out with onyx fittings, including an embedded rainfall shower over the tub.

You've a welcome wealth of sociable space too, your 120 square foot lounge features more of that gorgeous vintage flooring underfoot, every inch awash with the light that comes flooding through from your eighty square foot conservatory. In here you have floods of natural light, naturally, with a whitewashed exposed brick wall running down one side. The glazed rear wall opens out to your garden, where a raised deck leads down to your length of lawn, surrounded by gravel pathways, timber fencing and sleeper beds. All ending in a second deck and tree-dotted horizon.
