History of Douces Manor

This Manor House, situated on St. Leonards Street in West Malling, was built about 1738 by a Benjamin Hubble and was originally named 'St Leonard's House'. Following Benjamin's death the estate was shared by his two daughters, Catherine & Margaret. In 1777 Margaret married Thomas Douce and he later bought his sister-in-law, Catherine's share of the estate. Thomas proceeded to make extensive alterations to the house.

The Douce family continued to live in the house until 1823. With no heirs to take over the estate the family's executors let it out until 1851 when it was purchased by Captain John Savage R.N. a Deputy Lord-Lieutenant of Kent whose family continued to live there until 1906.

The Estate was then purchased by Henry Joseph Wood who changed the name of the house to 'Manor House'. Henry lived there, making many improvements, until his death in 1916. It was then bought by the Trustees of the Estate of Frederick Andrew who opened it as a 'Convalescent home for Ladies' in 1921.

At the outbreak of the Second World War in 1939, the Royal Air Force took over the civil aerodrome at King Hill, West Malling to operate it as a fighter base. They also requisitioned the Manor House to use as an Officers' Mess. The Officers soon turned the basement of the house into a bar nicknaming it 'The Twitch Inn' in reference to the body tremors suffered by some aircrew after a number of operations as in 'he's got the twitch!' The main source of lighting in the basement was candlelight and the officers used the smoke from the candles to 'write' there names on the white plaster ceiling. This and other graffiti on the walls survives to this day.

After the end of the War the House reverted to being a convalescent home for a brief period before it was forced to close. The house lay derelict for a number of years until 1968
