Set on the edge of the ever-popular village of Tedburn St Mary, Quashes Cottage is a beautifully characterful period home, believed to date back to circa 1750 and originally built as a farm worker's cottage for the adjoining Fulford Estate.

Positioned to back directly onto open countryside, the cottage enjoys far-reaching views and a rare sense of space and privacy, while remaining within easy reach of the village and the A30 for Exeter and Okehampton.

Arranged over three floors, the accommodation is both generous and versatile, with a wealth of original features including exposed beams and a fireplace with bread oven, alongside thoughtful updates that support modern living.

The ground floor offers a welcoming dual-aspect living room, where the fireplace creates a natural focal point, along with a spacious kitchen and dining room with exposed beams. To the rear, a large conservatory opens out onto the garden, providing an additional living space that connects the house to its surroundings throughout the seasons.

Upstairs, there are two double bedrooms and a modern bathroom on the first floor. The top floor is dedicated to a principal bedroom that spans the width of the cottage, enjoying elevated views across the garden and surrounding countryside. A freestanding bath positioned by the window offers a particularly special feature - ideal for quiet evenings and uninterrupted views.

Outside, the property truly comes into its own. The plot extends to approximately a quarter of an acre, with gardens wrapping to the South and West. There is ample parking, including space for a caravan, motorhome or trailer, as well as a detached studio offering excellent flexibility - whether as a workspace, creative studio or for running a small business. With established trees, areas of lawn, and open farmland beyond, the setting offers a strong sense of connection to nature. The elevated deck provides a perfect spot for outdoor dining and evening gatherings, combining a feeling of retreat with the convenience of village life.

Overall, Quashes Cottage offers a rare combination of character, space and setting — a home that lends itself equally to everyday living, creative work or a more considered pace of life, all within easy reach of Exeter and with no onward chain.
