70 High Street, Hemel Hempstead HP1 3AQ

Estimated to be over 350 years old, this utterly enchanting Grade II listed cottage, affectionately known locally for its iconic pink door – sits proudly within the heart of Hemel Old Town, just a short stroll from boutique shops, independent salons, cosy coffee spots, wine bars, a brand-new artisan pizzeria, and the wide open greenery of Gadebridge Park. It is Old Town living at its absolute finest – quaint, characterful, yet incredibly well connected.

Arranged over four beautifully configured floors, including a split-level ground and lower ground layout, the home is a masterclass in heritage charm meeting modern functionality. Original exposed beams, exposed brickwork, and timeworn floorboards weave through the property, creating warmth and texture at every turn.

The ground and lower ground floors offer an inviting open-plan kitchen, dining and breakfast space – ideal for entertaining or relaxed family living – with access to a versatile lower ground room currently utilised as a work-from-home studio. Whether you require a dedicated home office, creative space, guest bedroom or snug retreat, this flexible area adapts effortlessly to modern life.

Area Guide

Hemel Hempstead Old Town is the historic centre of the town, known for its charming High Street lined with Georgian, Victorian and Tudor buildings. It offers a village-like atmosphere with independent shops, cafés, pubs and restaurants, alongside cultural venues such as the Old Town Hall. The area is close to Gadebridge Park, providing large green spaces and family-friendly activities. With its blend of heritage, boutique businesses and a relaxed community feel, the Old Town provides a characterful alternative to the modern New Town nearby.
