INTRODUCTION

Drumhor is nestled within its own private plot in the historical village of Terregles. The property is quite unique having been bespoke built by its owner and has since been a wonderful family home for many years.

Drumhor is approached by its own private gated driveway with the whole property part bound by an extensive traditional stone and masonry wall, which defined much of the remaining 18th- and 19th-century parkland and property boundaries in the area. Beautiful, mature garden grounds wrap around the property where there are a variety of trees, including an apple and pear tree, and rhubarb in the garden.. Contained within the glass house is a grapevine and peach tree.

The bungalow itself offers spacious & diverse four-bedroom accommodation incorporating a sitting room, lounge, kitchen and a bathroom. The property itself was built by a family member in 1960 and has since be a wonderful family home. Further details along with a floor plan showing the dimensions of the accommodation, can be found later within this sales brochure.

The property is complemented by about 7 acres of grazing land which bounds to the garden grounds and although no gated access at present, any potential purchaser could easily install one. The property is registered with an agricultural holding number: 506/0092 but this does not restrict the property from other uses. Drumhor is of non-standard construction, and it would benefit from a degree of maintenance and modernisation.

Drumhor is located in an area known as Terregles Park was part of the Terregles Estate, the home of the Maxwell family, loyal supporters of Mary Queen of Scots. She made at least 2 visits to the estate staying in the original Terregles House, her 2nd visit was sadly when she was fleeing south after the defeat at Langside. Terregles House was demolished Circa 1962, however, traces of its existence can be seen, there is a grotto in one of the fields at Drumohr, which was part of an ornamental garden. A neighbouring property includes the ice house, raised garden and statues. Over time the land has been split up into dwellings and small holdings. During the 2nd World War Norwegian troops occupied the Terregles House and they built the tall stone wall that still stands all around the estate.

Nestled in the picturesque Dumfries and Galloway region, Terregles is a quaint village that embodies the charm of rural Scotland. With its lush green landscapes and serene surroundings, the village offers a peaceful retreat from the hustle and bustle of urban life. Terregles has a rich history, with roots tracing back to its agricultural past, and is surrounded by the stunning natural beauty of rolling hills and woodlands. The village is known for its close-knit community, where tradition and modernity blend seamlessly, creating a unique and welcoming atmosphere.

The nearest local services are located within the busy market town of Dumfries boasting all essential and professional services, along with three retail parks, an ice rink, variety of leisure facilities and a University Campus. Dumfries offers a wide choice of both primary and secondary schooling, with the Crichton University Campus only a short distance from the property, offering a wide variety of further education choices.

This area of Southwest Scotland enjoys one of the most varied and picturesque landscapes within Scotland, ranging from the moorland of the Southern Upland Hills to the bays and sandy beaches of the distinctive coastline. This is a rural county where agriculture and tourism thrive to form the backbone of the local economy. The area has been relatively unscathed by modern industry.

Communications to the area are much improved with the A75 trunk road providing quick access from the south via the M6 & M74. Drumhor is situated a short distance from the A701, which is a direct link to the M74. The international airports in Glasgow (72 miles) and Edinburgh (89 miles). Main train links are available from Dumfries (10.5 miles) Lockerbie (7.5 miles) and Carlisle (33 miles) offering a good service both north and south.
