Inglenook House represents a fantastic opportunity to purchase a property that has not been sold in over forty years. The property offers established gardens spanning approximately half an acre and multiple outbuildings which provide a wealth of opportunity for adding additional accommodation to the already generous floorplan of the main residence. The main accommodation comprises an entrance hall leading to a central dining room with open fire, a drawing room, lounge with wood burning stove, a front facing study, utility room, ground floor shower room, a rear hallway and a kitchen/dining room. Upstairs, there is a bathroom, a shower room and four bedrooms which are split across two floors. A charming countryside home with character and potential to improve in a standout village location. Viewing is highly advised.
