Location & History

Viceroy Close is a flagship collection of mansion flats considered to be the finest pre-World War II apartment blocks in Birmingham, which are still standing and maintained to a very high standard whilst retained many of the original features making this one of the most attractive and one of the largest apartments in the area. There are 162 flats within the PRIVATE location of Viceroy Close, these vary from one to five bedrooms across eight buildings on an eight acre site in Edgbaston, built in 1937 to a design by Mitchell and Bridgwater in conjunction with Gollins and Smeeton. Viceroy Close buildings have individual sculptures by O'Connor Barrett above the doorways of all 15 entrance areas. Viceroy Close includes a porter's lodge, also featuring a sculpture, that's still used by the resident caretaker, its own post box still collected by Royal Mail and water from an artesian well. Heating and hot water is provided to all apartments via a communal heating system - now back in vogue in larger modern developments. Each block has a lift and the estate is managed by a resident caretaker who resides in the Lodge and who ensures the smooth running of the site. Also offering ample communal residents parking and secure communal entrance.

Communal Surroundings

The communal garden areas are hidden from the road via wall borders, but once through the gates there are winding access roads giving access to each of the eight blocks though well maintained and mature lawn areas with decorative flower bed areas also containing mature
