Rising Sun Country Park

Rising Sun Country Park is a 162-hectare country park in Benton, North Tyneside, just north of Newcastle upon Tyne. It's a popular destination for walking, wildlife spotting, cycling, family outings, and photography. Some highlights include: Swallow Pond Nature Reserve with bird hides for birdwatching.

A network of walking, cycling, and bridle paths, including accessible routes. The Countryside Centre, which has a café, toilets, an exhibition area, and visitor facilities.

Rising Sun Farm, a working farm with sheep, pigs, poultry, and educational activities.

A children's play area and picnic spots. Free admission and free parking.

The park has an interesting history—it occupies land that was once home to the Rising Sun Colliery and an isolation hospital before being transformed into a country park after the mine closed in 196
