"Our favourite mornings begin slowly, with coffee in bed, before stepping into the bright kitchen where the garden and sky reveal themselves through the skylight and windows. In summer, we open both kitchen doors and watch the children drift in and out, the boundary between inside and out dissolving as the space extends into the garden. At the far end, the hammock becomes a quiet retreat, especially in the evening, when it catches the last of the sun. It is here, and throughout the house, that we most feel the sense of privacy and security — a calm, peaceful setting within a lively neighbourhood. In winter, the rhythm shifts. Evenings are spent gathered around the fire, settling in to watch a film and enjoy the warmth of the space. The location brings an ease to everyday life: shops are just moments away for anything forgotten or an impromptu treat, and the surrounding restaurants offer an abundance of choice, whether dining out or ordering in."
